Pinchot Cigaret Tax Faces Assembly Defeat

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3.

FEW OUTSIDERS realize the bigness of Los Angeles. A walk in New York from the Battery to Harlem and The Bronx, a drive from Chicago's stockyards to the Potter Palmer palace can be duplicated here with much to spare.

In one direction you go more than 20 miles to a magnificent seaport, one of the finest in the world.

In another direction you go from Mr. Charles Baad's Biltmore Hotel, which is in the center, out along Wilshire boulevard to Santa Monica and the Pacific ocean—a 17-mile street, beautifully lighted and lined with modern stores and ingenious real estate conversation.

Today's trip, in another direction, leads south, 10 miles past the Sears-Roebuck plant and hundreds of others, to the great livestock show, more interesting for those with farmer's blood in their veins than anything else on earth.

IN THE GREAT enclosure here thousands of animals bellow, squeal and bleat their protests and anxieties. There is an amount of "atmosphere" that 20 Hollywoods could not create.

A thousand men wear enormous "ten gallon" hats quite naturally, having been almost born in them. Cowboys that never wore anything but high heels, sharp toes, big spurs and chaps walk around interested in curiously - dressed individuals from the city.

HIGH ON A gigantic pole there a powerful magnifying broadcaster gives information and sings songs. One ends lugubriously:

"Take me to the prairie and throw the soil over me. I'm only a young cowboy, I know I done wrong."

Another:

"When they aim a gun at you, they aim right at your eye. If they miss, you go on living. If they hit, you die, way out in the Great Northwest."

Another song was about "The days of old, when men dug for gold," all very homelike.

PAUL P. HILL, livestock expert, shows you through the show as efficiently as Virgil conducted his distinguished client through the lower regions.

First he shows the champion carload of two-year-old Herefords, 15 steers, fat, suspicious, huddling together. All the animals in this show, steers, calves, sheep and hogs, are built on the plan of the fence constructed by a Dutch farmer in the Catskills.

"I make her three feet high, three feet wide, then if she blows over, it is just the same."

NEXT TO THE two-year-old Hereford champions comes a 15-carload group of three-year-old Herefords. They are champions in their class and come from William Randolph Hearst's 240,000-acre ranch on the edge of the Pacific at San Simeon, half way between here and San Francisco.

His father, the late Senator Hearst, raised pure-bred cattle and horses there more than 50 years ago. His son has added 200,000 acres to the size of the ranch.

THE LOAD of jet black Aberdeens from Yakima, in the state of Washington, would tempt any farmer. The two-year-old champions, by the way, come from the Matador Land and Cattle Company in Texas, and were fed by Dan D. Casement.

A PATHETIC LITTLE creature, standing in his box stall with American flags draped around him, as happy, proud and ill-informed as any stock speculator, in September, 1929, was the champion yearling steer named El Oso, which means "the bear." Paul Murphy brought him from Manhattan, Kan.

He has been drinking the milk of two cows in addition to all the grain he can hold, and probably looks forward to an endless succession of cows and grain.

But he will be sold at auction when this week ends, poor thing, hit on the head and, after his throat has been cut, he will be eaten as "prize baby beef."

Can you imagine any more perfect imitation of the 1929 stock speculator? He was eaten as baby lamb.

ONE BUILDING contains exhibits by young American farm boys, "future farmers of America." They are as much interested in raising the champion hog as some other boys are in making a touchdown, and more usefully interested.

IT WOULD DELIGHT you to see a Duroc Jersey boar, that comes walking slowly to appear before the judges. Dull red in color, unbelievably fat, carrying an ear of corn in his mouth to make him look cheerful, he is as tall as a small horse, and could carry half a dozen men on his back. He comes from the Lillard farm, of Arlington, Tex.

Cleat Brooks, able young American farmer, shaped like a chisel, broad at the shoulders, getting thinner all the way down, likes Hampshires and Durocs best of all the hogs. He probably knows as much about swine as anybody in America, and says hogs can be raised profitably on the desert with a temperature of 110, but you

Hagmaier in Break With Governor Over Issue; Musmanno Scores Plan

HARRISBURG, Dec. 3.—Gov. Pinchot's 2-cent cigaret tax proposal is doomed to defeat.

This became apparent today as opposition to the levy grew to almost unbeatable proportions under the leadership of Allegheny County legislators.

Indications that the Governor himself had come to this realization were seen in a call for a "secret conference" of 20 members of the House, issued by the executive for Monday afternoon. Gov. Pinchot refused to reveal the names of the conferees.

SPLITS WITH PINCHOT

All revenue measures must originate in the House and, according to Representative Louis Hagmaier, of Aspinwall, opponents of the proposed cigaret tax hold a preponderant majority. Hagmaier, ardent Pinchot supporter, had split with the Governor on the cigaret measure and is leading a House group sponsoring another revenue plan for unemployment relief which will be offered as a compromise. Hagmaier said:

"We will be absolutely opposed to the 2-cent cigaret tax. A very definite majority of the House will be opposed to all taxes other than a 1-cent emergency gasoline tax agreed upon under our program."

Protests have been lodged against the proposal to require a

PHILLIPS SEES UPTURN HERE

Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company, reporting to President Hoover's unemployment committee has announced that conditions in Pittsburgh have improved during the past two months. This applies both to business and unemployment.

In his report to Walter Gifford, head of the committee, of which Mr. Phillips is a member, the latter said:

"The pickup here indicates an upward turn. Conditions are encouraging. While the September increase was reflected principally among businessses which usually show a gain at this time of the year I am encouraged by it. It shows that we are near the level where further reductions would be impractical."

Mr. Phillips cited building permits had increased 51 per cent in October of 1931 over the same month in 1930. Mr. Phillips also quoted extensively from the report of the Bureau of Business Research issued late in October.

Confesses to 'Mercy' Slaying of Baroness

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Else Bang, 32, told the police today that she had given her mother, the Baroness Von Dueben, an overdose of medicine, knowing that it would kill her and relieve her of the sufferings she had endured for years.

The baroness died last week and Mrs. Bang told the Rev. Johannes Engel how she had administered the medicine. The clergyman and her father accompanied her to the police today.

Vote to Settle Dry War Asked By Gerard Here

JAMES W. GERARD

Demands States Get Right to Control Own Rum Sales

Prohibition is the greatest problem facing United States and must be settled with a referendum vote to give the individual states the right to decide for themselves, James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, declared here today.

Gerard speaks tonight before the annual banquet of the Pittsburgh Builders' Exchange in Hotel Schenley. His discussion on economic problems will include prohibition and political signs.

Advocates of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment today face a greater opposition than anti-prohibitionists, Gerard said. There is added to the prohibitionists' cause, the support of bootleggers, corrupt politicians and police officials, he declare'. Gerard upheld the right of referendum by saying:

"Why persons 2,000 miles away should tell me what is good for the stomach is ridiculous. State control of the sale of liquors will not mean the return of the saloon. It should be based on the Ontario-Quebec plan. The wet issue will be found an important factor in the presidential election."

That a Democratic nominee would win the presidential race today was Gerard's belief. He favors for the candidacy Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Newton D. Baker, or Gov. Albert C. Ritchey, in the order named.

Coty, Perfume King, Must Pay Ex-Wife $5,200,000

PARIS, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Senator Francois Coty, prefume manufacturer and publisher of the Paris newspaper Figaro, was ordered yesterday to pay his former wife, Yvonne Lebaron, $5,200,000 alimony.

The court refused Coty's plea to delay payment, based upon a declaration that the depression has hit his business.

Coty has already paid $12,200,000 alimony. The sum he is now called upon to pay is the final installment on alimony of $17,200,000, alleged half of his entire fortune, which the divorce stipulated.

The Cotys were married in 1900. He borrowed money from a brother of his wife to start in business. She worked in the laboratory to keep the secret of their perfumes in the family.

They amassed a fortune estimated at 860,000,000 francs, or more than $34,000,000. When the divorce came in 1929, Mme. Coty claimed half the fortune because there was no marriage contract.

Most of the Coty fortune was understood to have been made in the United States and England. The perfumer recently lost large sums in the unsuccessful attempts of the late Joseph Lebrix and Marcel Doret to fly from Paris to Tokio, which he financed.

THUGS' BULLETS PERIL MANY IN SQUIRREL HILL

Store Robbers Open Fire as Shotgun Slugs Shatter Windows in Escaping Car

Gunplay which endangered pedestrians in the heart of the Squirrel Hill business district provided a thrilling windup of a chain store robbery at 2613 Murray avenue today.

As two robbers fled from the store with $55 they garnered from two registers and were leaping into an automobile operated by an accomplice, Albert Poli, 28, chef in a restaurant at 2607 Murray avenue, emptied a double-barreled shotgun which had been ready for a hunting trip at the bandits, shattering the rear and side windows of their car.

The bandits returned the fire as passersby fled to doorways. Poli said they aimed at him, but he escaped unscathed.

BANDITS LOCK DOOR

The two robbers entered the store and locked the door. One went to the cash register behind the grocery counter while the other ran to the meat counter register.

Vincent Calabrese, meat department manager, darted for the cellar stairway. One of the robbers shouted:

"Stop or I'll fill you full of lead."

Calabrese halted. J. J. Egli, grocery manager; Julia Hapchuck, 20, and F. J. Vivirito, clerks, and an unidentified woman customer were herded in the middle of the store.

While one robber kept the group covered with his revolver, his pal took all the cash from the two registers and $6.50 from Vivirito's pockets.

WOMAN GIVES ALARM

Meanwhile, Mrs. Nancy Ruggeri, who lives above Joseph Poli's restaurant, next door, had found the store door locked when she went to make a purchase and discovered the holdup. She ran to the restaurant and informed Albert Poli, brother of the proprietor.

As the bandits ran from the store Poli was waiting and fired as they joined their companion in their car, which had been held with the motor running in Forward avenue, nearby. After firing at Poli the bandits sped down Forward avenue into Beechwood boulevard.

Miss Hapchuck, describing the holdup, said:

"When they walked in they told me and the woman customer not to be afraid as they would not harm us."

The robbers, according to police, answer the description of those who held up the grocery of P. Onickman, 2456 Fifth avenue, early today, obtaining $23 from Onickman and a Negro customer.

Rain on Way Here, Mercury to Rise

A rainstorm advancing from the South is expected to reach here tomorrow, bringing higher temperatures. This morning the mercury fell to an official 28 and to 21 in some outlying districts. Absence of wind made the cold less noticeable. This afternoon the temperature ranged in the 50s. It will remain above freezing tonight, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted.

3 PITTSBURGH HUNTERS LOST ALL NIGHT

Lose Way After Bagging Deer, Suffer From Cold; Toll in State Reaches 13

Three Pittsburgh hunters dressed their venison kill today with thoughts of a terrifying night spent in the mountains of Westmoreland County, where they were lost.

Another was seriously wounded today in Fulton County.

As the three, Gabriel Pavoli, of East Liberty, Charles Hoffer, of East Pittsburgh, and Ernest King, of Oakmont, each of whom killed a deer, reflected on their night spent wandering around Laurel Hill Mountains, reports filtered in that the death toll throughout the state had mounted to 13. Many others are in hospitals, seriously wounded, as the result of the two day old hunting season.

Pavoli, Hoffer and King, after spending the night lost in the mountains, were found by game wardens, suffering from the biting cold. Each refused to abandon the deer he had killed.

Wilbert Gries, 20, of Brentwood, was shot in the right hip while hunting with companions near Knobsville, in Fulton County.

James Winkelman, 22, of Dilltown, Indiana County, died this afternoon in a Johnstown hospital, the result of gunshot wound suffered while hunting on Tuesday.

Wounded by a stray bullet while hunting near Cameron, Tuesday, A. M. Lackey, 69, superintendent of the Akron Salt Company, Akron, O., died in a hospital at St. Marys, Pa., today. Funeral services will be held Saturday at Butler, Pa., his former home.

LEAVITT TRIAL AGAIN DELAYED

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Dec. 3.—(INS.)—C. Van Ness Leavitt, brother-in-law of President Hoover, was granted another delay today, this time for one day, in his police court trial on charges of violating the prohibition law.

Leavitt's case was put over until tomorrow because two federal prohibition officers, who assisted at his arrest, were unable to appear in court since they were already under subpena in another city.

Police Judge C. A. M. Spencer ordered subpenas issued for the federal officers. Leavitt was in court, and his attorney, M. M. Fogel, opposed the continuance, which was the fourth in the history of the case.

Leavitt has denied the charges, claiming he had been "left holding the sack."

Court Sets Hearing To Ban Doe Killing

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Dec. 3.—(INS.)—The sportsmen's fight to stop the slaughter of doe in Luzerne County resulted in Judge B. R. Jones fixing Monday for a hearing on the restraining order he granted against the State Game Commission yesterday.

At the same time the jurist warned the Game Commission to heed the restraining order. The action was begun by the United Sportsmen's Association of Pennsylvania when reports of an extremely heavy kill of does were made Tuesday. The order, it is said, affects only this county.

Mishaps at Play Take Lives of Two School Pupils Here in Day

ELIZABETH V. M'ALEER, 8 . . . FELL, STRUCK HEAD ON PAVING

Elizabeth, child acrobatic dancer who in the school yard near her home, 3627 Charlotte street, practiced her dancing to the delight of her playmates. She slipped, injured her head, died shortly after.

Girl Killed in Fall; Munhall Boy 33rd Football Victim

Two school pupils are dead today, the result of injuries suffered at play.

Elizabeth V. McAleer, 8, of 3627 Charlotte street, who had a reputation in the Lawrenceville district for being an acrobatic dancer, died at 4 o'clock this morning from injuries suffered last evening in the school yard near her home. She was playing, after school hours, to the delight of numerous playmates, when she struck her head on the concrete paving.

The little girl's friends said she liked to walk on her hands and do other athletic stunts her school mates at St. Augustine's School performed. She was trying to walk on her hands when she fell, it was said.

Steve Allas, 12, of 2004 Whitaker way, Munhall, today was recorded as the thirty-third football fatality of the season. Injured three weeks ago while playing football with companions of his own age on a vacant lot near his home, he had battled concussion of the brain since. It was said that he struck his head violently during a scrimmage.

Hurt in Sandlot Game, Boy Grid Player Dies

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—George O. Pusey, 13, of Collingwood, a suburb, whose skull was fractured in a sand-lot game Sunday, died last night.

After the game, young Pusey complained of pains in his neck, but an examination by a physician failed to reveal the injury. He returned to school yesterday, but when the pains recurred, he was rushed to a hospital where an X-ray revealed the injury. He died soon after an emergency operation.

10 Non-union Miners Attacked at Avella

AVELLA, Pa., Dec. 3.—Ten non-union miners going to work in the P. & W. mine of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation here yesterday, were attacked when waylaid by a group of union miners, they reported to Sheriff J. A. Seaman. Several of the alleged attackers were identified by their victims, it was reported by police.

RENEW DRIVE TO REACH QUOTA

Group Pledges Sum Provided Goal of Welfare Group Is Reached; Workers Cheered

A list of Welfare Fund contributors appears on Page 25.

A small group of individuals and corporations has offered to give $750,000 to the Welfare Fund providing it will assure the goal of $5,981,184 being attained, Joseph Dilworth, general chairman, announced at the noon meeting of volunteer workers in the William Penn Hotel.

The offer is contingent on the fund being brought up to the point where the additional $750,000 would close the gap, Dilworth explained. This means a resolicitation of those who have already given in an effort to raise more than $750,000.

Encouraged by the offer, the drive will be continued until the end of next week, it was announced. Identity of those making the offer was not disclosed.

$4,453,000 PLEDGED

The fund, including $203,000 reported at today's workers' meeting, now stands at $4,453,000.

The following statement, bearing signatures of Dilworth, A. E. Oliver and Frank R. Phillips was read at today's meeting:

"The extremely generous offer by a small group of individuals and corporations of $750,000 to be given providing the remaining amount of the budget of the Welfare Fund and Allegheny County Emergency Association, is raised, now makes possible what had seemed to many an almost impossible task.

"It presents a challenge which we believe the people of this community will be eager to accept. While as of today only $4,453,000 has been raised, a survey shows that $200,000 to $250,000 can reasonably be expected from sources not yet heard from.

LACK $750,000

"This means that approximately $750,000 must be raised by asking those who have already contributed to increase their subscriptions in order to meet this public-spirited offer. Therefore the resolicitation must be met with sympathy and support and we hope that even those who feel that they have done their utmost will not be offended by being appealed to again."

A check for $8,104.30, representing 10 per cent of the sales of the Joseph Horne Company yesterday, was received this morning.

Reports from campaign headquarters show that many individuals who already had contributed are making substantial increases.

Mrs. Henry Chalfant increased her subscription from $8,000 to $10,000. Mrs. Remsen V. Messler increased her gift of $1,100 to $1,350. Edward W. Gwinner, from $1,000 to $1,300. Miss Sarah Ricketts, from $175 to $1,500, and a new subscription of $1,000 was received from J. W. Atrott.

Numerous increases in smaller gifts also have been reported. Postal employes of the railway mail service have turned in $3,600 and the city school teachers so far have donated $65,000.

Rail Price-Fixing Probe Report Due

Ann Harding's Shoulder Dislocated—But How?

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Ann Harding, film actress, was confined to her hotel room here today with a dislocated shoulder, but she doesn't know how it happened.

En route from California to Venice, Fla., to make exterior scenes of a picture in which she will appear, she was beset with pain on reaching Jacksonville last night, so she left her train and summoned a physician.

Her secretary, Miss Maria Lombard, said the actress thought the pains came from neuritis until the doctor found the dislocation. Miss Harding could offer no explanation of how or when she was injured.

Harry C. Bannister, her husband, is en route here from the West Coast by airplane with Dr. William C. Branch, family physician. As soon as her condition improves sufficiently, she expects to fly to Venice.

Bannister telegraphed last night from Albuquerque, N. M., that he would proceed as quickly as weather conditions permit.

HOUSE DEMOCRATIC CHIEFS MOVE FOR DRY LAW SHOWDOWN

Anti-Drys Plan Definite Program After Congress Starts Session Next Week

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The prohibition issue was definitely assured a hearing in the new Congress today when Democratic leaders of the House agreed to liberalize the rules of that body.

The Republicans already are agreed upon the circumstances under which the prohibition question can be brought to a vote by petition of 145 members.

Modification of the rules will be considered in the Democratic caucus on Saturday.

With opposition to a vote on the question crumbling after a decade of Congressional controversy, proposals were brought forward both by wets and drys to start quick action and thus clear the way for tax and unemployment relief legislation.

Anti-prohibition leaders, confident that they at last will win a vote and write a record for the 1932 national campaign, planned to develop a definite program immediately after Congress meets next week.

A referendum on the Eighteenth Amendment, through resubmission to state constitutional conventions to which delegates would be elected solely on this issue, was proposed as the first step.

Pending action on repeal by the states, Congress will be asked to legalize 3 per cent beer and light wines. This plan was urged by Representative J. Charles Linthicum, Democrat, of Maryland, leader of the House "wet" block.

Socialists Oppose Dry Test in Finland

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Opposition from the Socialists and the Communists is expected when the government's measure authorizing a nation-wide referendum on prohibition is presented in Parliament this evening.

The government's bill published today, asserts that in the past 12 years prohibition has not produced the changes in the nation's habits which were expected, but that, on the contrary, the law has been openly and persistently violated.

Also, the statement accompanying the measure asserts that elimination of the liquor tax has transferred a heavy burden upon the citizens, whose taxes have been increased to make up for the liquor loss.

Opponents of prohibition have dwelt at length upon what they describe as the rise of a lawless element which derives a substantial and untaxed income from illicit liquor traffic.

Scrapping of R-100 Starts in England

CARDINGTON, England, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Sledgehammers battered against the framework of the big dirigible R-100 today as 20 workmen began to carry out the government's order scrapping the ship to save money. When their work is a little further advanced a steam roller will run over the parts of the framework and flatten them out.

Bootleg Gasoline Costly to Virginia

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Bootlegging of gasoline to escape payment of tax has cost the state more than $100,000 during the past year, officials of the State Motor Vehicle Department estimated today. Additional legislation to tighten up the existing law will be asked at the next session of the General Assembly, they announced.

Fire Perils Stable At West End Plant

DEFEAT FACES CIGARET TAX

two-cent tax stamp on each package of 20 cigarets by retailers who hold that it would lead to "bootlegging" of cigarets on a large scale. Other Allegheny County representatives opposed to the measure have expressed their views.

MUSMANNO STAND

Representative M. A. Musmanno said:

"It has not been by any means conclusively proven that the state cigaret tax would be the revenue raiser its proponents argue for it—in fact, the experience of other states has been to the direct contrary."

Representative William F. Stadtlander:

"I am opposed to further taxation of the poor man, who is already heavily burdened, and to my mind the placing of additional tax on cigarets would be placing it directly on the poor."

The bill is now in the hands of the House Ways and Means Committee.

PINCHOT NOTIFIED

Gov. Pinchot today was said to have been informed by four senators who attended a conference last week when a compromise program was decided upon by a Senate group that the feeling against the cigaret tax is so great that it is now doubtful it would pass either Senate or House.

Fate of the proposed gasoline tax still was in doubt, but it appeared almost certain, however, that motorists would be required to pay more than the present 3-cent impost after January 1.

There is some bitterness regarding the plan to increase the gasoline tax above 3 cents a gallon, and that feeling is not restricted to one side. The Governor still is of the opinion that the increase should be to 5 cents a gallon, although the compromise plan announced from his office after his meeting with Senate leaders proposed a boost to 4 cents for 15 months. While many Total members dislike voting for the tax, they want the roads, and the higher levy on motor fuel is likely to become effective on New Years Day.

Youngstown Land Purchases Probed

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—City land purchases amounting to $423,000 for street widening purposes were being investigated by the Mahoning County grand jury today. Prosecutor Ray I. Thomas said no evidence that the purchases were irregular had been presented, but instituted the investigation when minutes of the city board of control revealed the purchases had been made without authorization of the council.

Boy, 15, Gets Life For Killing Woman

EX-POLICEMAN FINED FOR RUM

Matthew S. Quay Row, who was a sergeant of the State Police seven years ago, was fined $200 by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson today after pleading guilty to violating the liquor laws in Penn Borough, Westmoreland County.

A co-defendant, Mary DeVitto, 41, was fined $25. The charge was sale and possession of liquor.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Investigation of the Federal Farm Board will be proposed in the Senate by Senator Norris, (Rep.), of Nebraska, he said today.

Gilday Seeks Release; Victim Fights for Life

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Unable to post $15,000 bond, Daniel L. Gilday, crusader against vice and liquor, looked hopefully today to another weapon of the law to effect his release from jail where he is held for the shooting of Herman Knol, 17.

The veteran reformer was to appear again today before Judge John Prystalski to hear the outcome of his plea for a writ of habeas corpus.

The refusal of his wife to sign a release on some property was a contributing factor in keeping Gilday in jail.

Meanwhile, the victim of Gilday's gun lay in a critical condition in Englewood Hospital. The Knol youth, who was shot in the abdomen when he tried to help the allegedly staggering Gilday to his home, has only a fighting chance to live. His case was seriously complicated by the setting in of peritonitis, and physicians expect a crisis within 24 hours.

FIGHT TO STRIP DRY SNOOPERS OF PISTOLS

Three Societies Declare War On 'Tin Star' Volunteers Crusading With Guns

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Three anti-prohibition organizations today declared war on unofficial dry agents.

Executives of the three societies were to hold an "emergency" conference to formulate a demand upon state, county and city officials that all amateur "snoopers" be immediately disarmed.

Decision to make such a demand was precipitated by the shooting of Herman Knol, 17, by Daniel L. Gilday, 63, reformer and volunteer investigator of speakeasies and their results. When arrested, Gilday was found to have in his possession badges issued by the State's Attorney's office and a former Chicago Police Commissioner. The gun with which young Knol was critically wounded was given Gilday by a federal prohibition agent.

Today's meeting will bring together the local heads of the Crusaders, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform.

Explaining the objectives of the campaign, Col. Ira L. Reeves, executive secretary of the Crusaders, said:

"We want to know how many snoopers are carrying guns without authority. We want the names of the organizations they represent."

The Crusaders have also announced their intention of investigating reports that amateur dry agents, representing reform organizations, have been receiving pay from the city.

POOLE MACHINE GETS APPROVAL

HARRISBURG, Dec. 3.—Approval was given today by Secretary of the Commonwealth R. J. Beamish for the use in Pennsylvania of the automatic Poole and Shoup voting machines. Previous approval had been given to these machines by the separate board of examiners.

Two examinations were made for the Poole machines. At the time of the first test the machines jammed. Mechanical difficulties developed with the Poole machine at yesterday's examination, but the board gave its approval to the machine.

Officials of the Poole company gave the Secretary assurance that adjustments would be made to the mechanism to overcome these difficulties.

Secretary Beamish said he proposes to visit the various factories manufacturing voting machines to get first-hand information on production methods.

He was arrested at the Penn avenue address after police had received complaints from half a dozen girls who had answered an advertisement offering positions at attractive salaries.

All of the girls told the same story, detectives said—that Reese took them to a second-floor room and tried to make love to them.

Blanche Peckinbaugh, 24, of 4518 Forbes street, told police that she had answered three advertisements since June and found Reese at each of the three addresses. Mary Kern, 23, of the same address, corroborated Miss Peckinbaugh's story and told of her own experiences with Reese.

JAPAN DECREES ARMAMENT INCREASE

League Considers Way to Put Pressure on Tokio To Compel Compromise

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service.

TOKIO, Dec. 3.—The Japanese Supreme War Council, with the approval of the Emperor, has completed a program for army reform next year, it was announced today.

The program, including the expansion of aircraft, tank and armored car forces, and the establishment of a chemical warfare school, will involve the expenditure of $14,000,000.

The 14th Division of the Army, now in Japan, will be sent to Manchuria to replace the present garrison forces, and the 16th Division will be sent to Korea.

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

QUAI D'ORSAY, PARIS, Dec. 3.—The League of Nations council's slow and tortuous progress toward a Manchurian peace agreement between Japan and China was halted again today as delegates of the neutral powers sought some means of bringing pressure upon Japan for withdrawal of her new demands for control of South Manchuria.

Not only were the Japanese insisting upon military control of the proposed neutral zone in the Chinchow area, with the evacuation of Chinese troops, but they demanded the Chinese regime set up in Mukden, following the Japanese occupation, should take over the Chinchow government from the present Chinese administration.

Immediate objections to this program were raised by Dr. Alfred Sze, speaking for the Nanking government, although there was a feeling in some quarters the issue was an academic one, so far as the League Council is concerned, in view of the Sino-Japanese negotiations at Peiping.

Meanwhile rumors were current in the corridors of the foreign office this evening that Japan was sending a counter-proposal to the League council's projected resolution settling the Manchurian conflict. The new Japanese proposal may carry the League's discussions well into next week.

MUKDEN, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—A raid by Chinese bandits at Shanhaikwan, forcing Japanese residents to take refuge in the Japanese barracks, was reported today to military headquarters here.

Japanese intelligence reports said there was no sign of a decrease in the number of Chinese troops in the Talingo-Chinchow area, and that armored trains were moving into that region with reinforcements. A Chinese division arrived at Koupangtze from Jehol, dispatches said, while an ammunition train passed through Shanhaikwan prior to the Chinese bandit attack.

Washington Sees Peace Near in Manchuria

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—On the basis of present reports from Paris, the American government believes a settlement of the Sino-Japanese crisis in Manchuria may be achieved by the League of Nations Council by the end of this week, it was indicated today.

William R. Castle, Jr., undersecretary of state, said the State Department is receiving regular reports of progress at Paris which indicate the negotiations are moving "calmly and confidently" for a settlement. He indicated this government is not seriously concerned over the numerous apparent hitches in the parleys which have occurred during the past few days.

This government has given no consideration as yet to the question of American representation on the neutral commission of inquiry to be sent by the league to investigate the Manchurian situation, Castle said.

Hoover Raps High Interest Charged Home Builders

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—A command to heed the fundamentals of human sentiment was thrown by President Hoover last night across the path of technical endeavor for better housing of the nation's families. He said:

"They never sing songs about a pile of rent receipts. Those immortal ballads, Home, Sweet Home, My Old Kentucky Home, and the Little Gray Home in the West, were not written about tenements or apartments."

So Mr. Hoover gave the keynote to the thousand delegates he welcomed to the conference on home building and ownership. They settled today to work on more than 30 reports of experts which have been in preparation during the past year.

"The essential of the Hoover design for the conference is that purchase of a home for his family shall be made possible to the average man on much the same basis that he acquires a car, a radio or a fur coat for his wife.

"The President seeks to do away with the expensive financing now forced upon people of limited means. Though they have little cash and their principal asset is a job and good character, they should have available to them financing that would 'dignify the name credit,' and do away with terms and risks comparable to the credit extended by a pawnbroker."

Collegians Score Attack On Patriotic Societies

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—An attack on the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion and the R. O. T. C., as "professional patriots" by a member of the faculty of Teachers College, Columbia University, has precipitated a campus uproar at the institution today.

Young women who are sisters of American Legion members or daughters of D. A. R. members were holding lively debates today on a speech made in Milbank chapel yesterday by Dr. William H. Kilpatrick, professor of education.

Kilpatrick, a disciple of the eminent philosopher-pacifist, Prof. John Dewey, of Columbia University, denounced flag-saluting in schools, the teaching of military science at colleges, and the glorification of war in history text books in addition to derogating "professional patriots."

He said that the fear of pacifist talk and literature by patriots in war time merely proves that the warlike instincts of people are the result of careful militaristic propaganda, and are not instinctive, as many have claimed.

He described military training in schools as "morally vicious."

CHILD FORCED TO LIVE IN PIANO BOX MADE WARD OF STATE

NEIGHBORS HISS PAIR ACCUSED OF TORTURE

Girl of 8 Forced to Live Outdoors, Scantily Clad, While Cat Had Luxuries

International News Service.

ESCANABA, Mich., Dec. 3. Frail, backward and undernourished, 8-year-old Elaine Plucker, who was forced to live almost continuously in a piano box in all sorts of weather for nearly two years, today was taken from her father and stepmother and made a ward of the state.

Coming shortly after the nationally known and tragic case of Edith Riley in Washington, public indignation against the parents of Elaine mounted here.

Testimony that the child virtually lived in a piano box outdoors in all kinds of weather, clad only in a flimsy dress, and a recital of parental neglect, aroused 500 persons in a courtroom to loud hisses and boos.

CRUELTY DENIED

The parents, Howard and Adele Plucker, visibly cringed before the angry crowd. They denied they were cruel.

Pressed for a statement by International News Service, Plucker, a railroad electrician, said:

"I don't believe in pampering children."

Mrs. Plucker, when questioned by Prosecutor Glenn W. Jackson, admitted that she frequently kissed the family cat, but that she never showed such a sign of affection for Elaine. Neighbors testified that the family cat was taken on automobile rides by the Pluckers while Elaine was forced to remain in her "piano box home."

School authorities said Elaine was undernourished and kept frequently from her classes. The State Welfare Department entered the case today and William Carpenter, state welfare director, promised a "full investigation."

NEIGHBORS ACT

The hearing at which Elaine was ordered to a state institution by Judge Judd Yelland was instituted by neighbors of the Pluckers.

Women wept openly in court as the story of neglect was unfolded.

The child was a frightened figure on the stand. She watched her father and stepmother constantly while answering the prosecutor's questions. She said they had not mistreated her.

The crowd, at this point, became unruly. Loud hisses and boohs broke out. Men and women rose from their seats.

Mrs. Cora Plucker, Elaine's grandmother, testified against her son. She corroborated the neighbors' stories of neglect.

SUE CLARA BOW AGAIN ON BETS

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—For the second time within a year, an allegedly unpaid gambling debt has been charged to Clara Bow, red-haired screen actress.

A suit for $1,100 was on file here today against the actress on a demand note claimed to have been given in a gambling debt. Rex Bell, at whose ranch Miss Bow has been staying, was named co-defendant.

The suit was brought by Louis Cornero, one of the owners of a gambling casino, who said the demand note was given last September 26 and requests for payment had been unsuccessful.

Some time ago, James McKay, one of the owners of a gambling resort at Calneva, Nev., announced the actress had stopped payment on checks for $13,900 given for alleged gambling debts.

WON'T GIVE UP BABY

MRS. LOUISE O'LEARY, 23, AND HER SON, GEORGE THOMAS

Mrs. O'Leary, with her baby, ousted from their home (daddy deserted four years ago) and sheltered by financially pressed Mr. and Mrs. Martin Noah, Jr., Margaret street, Munhall, themselves parents of four. Mrs. O'Leary says she'll keep George at all costs.

EVICTED WIFE, BABE GET HOME

The power of mother love joined two women today in a desperate battle against an insistent and growing need for money.

Mrs. Martin Noah, Jr., of 1415 Margaret street, Munhall, has taken into her home 3½-year-old George Thomas O'Leary and his mother, Mrs. Louise O'Leary, 23, ousted from their own home last week for non-payment of rent.

Mrs. Noah herself is the mother of four children, one only 6 months old, and her husband, a mill worker, is employed only three days a week. She said:

"It makes a pretty tough job—two more mouths to feed the way things are now—

"But I'd starve before I'd see that little girl separated from her child. She'd go crazy if she'd have to give him up."

Mrs. O'Leary told how she was deserted by her husband six months before George Thomas was born and how, in the years that followed, she struggled to make a home for him. She lost her job in a restaurant and has been able to find nothing since. She added:

"Something's bound to happen soon, though. I can't give up my child. There's some way to earn enough money to support the two of us."

SOCIETY DRIVING MRS. BIDDLE TO ALASKA

Philadelphia Matron, Tired Of Civilization, to Leave Babies for Trek to Wilds

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—"I don't care for civilization, I get sick of society. I'm going up to Alaska next week to work out my own problems."

Mrs. Edward M. Biddle is going north next Wednesday, alone.

She is leaving her husband and three children for six months to live alone in the ice-bound wastes of the Alaskan Mountains. She is not going as an explorer; she is not going, as some people have said, to do research work on the living conditions of Alaskan women. She is going simply because she believes in every woman's right to be alone.

I talked to her yesterday in the Park avenue apartment of Mrs. Charles E. Miller, where she is fitting up her heavy camera and Arctic equipment for her long trek north.

"Some of my friends have laughed at me, and say I have 'too much thyroid,' or something, but I think I am just one of those lonely people—there are so many of them, too—who can't feel that they are really alive while they are existing among hundreds of others and attending to things that seem trivial.

"I have had to make a good fight to make this trip, because after all it's not just the cutest thing in the world to leave your three babies and your husband for six months, but there it is. I just want to do it more than anything else in life. Whether it solves my problems, I'll tell you better when I return."

Mrs. Biddle's husband, who is a prominent Philadelphia lawyer, is giving her every help on her adventurous scheme.

Her death, they said, apparently was caused by a heart attack.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon in Mt. Lebanon.

DEL RIO LAWYER TELLS DIVORCE CASE WOES

Declares Late Husband of Star Demanded Contract Shunning Her Earnings

By DOROTHY CROWLEY
International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3.—Further details of the difficulties of obtaining a "quiet little divorce" for Dolores Del Rio, fiery Mexican film star, were expected to be revealed today when Attorney Gunther Lessing resumed the witness stand in his $31,000 suit against his former client.

Testifying about the "special and extraordinary services" for which he claims Miss Del Rio still owes him $31,000, Lessing listed the divorce as "one of the most distressing and distasteful" that he was called upon to perform. He declared:

BESIEGED BY WRITERS

"I had at least 3 reporters besieging me night and day for stories about the contemplated suit. They called me up, they telegraphed me, they even woke me up at midnight to verify some rumor or other.

"And, worst of all, her press agent thought the divorce was a good chance for front page publicity and it was all I could do to keep him leashed while I quieted the reporters with prepared statements."

As he recounted his "extralegal" difficulties over the divorce which ended Miss Del Rio's marriage to the late Jaime Del Rio, scion of a wealthy Mexican family, Lessing touched briefly upon two property agreements which, he said, he prepared for the film star. He said:

"He hated to be called 'Mr. Dolores Del Rio" and insisted that a contract be drawn up excluding him from sharing in his wife's earnings."

FATHER SAVES 4 FROM FIRE

Four children were lifted from their beds and carried to safety by their father while flames licked through their home in Braddock early today.

John Trovato was awakened by smoke spreading through the two-story frame house at 549-551 Corey avenue.

When he opened the cellar door to investigate he was met by a sheet of flame.

He aroused his wife, who hurried to the street, then made two trips to the street carrying his four children—Frances, 4; Mary, 6; Joseph, 8, and Daniel, 10.

Firemen from Braddock and Rankin fought for three hours to confine the flames to the basement, but considerable damage was done.

Merchandise in Trovato's meat market on the first floor was said to have been damaged.

HELENE COSTELLO ... MAURICE COSTELLO'S DAUGHTER

Auto Rival Won Mate, Wife Says; Wins Divorce

Her husband left her for an automobile, Mrs. Dorothy M. Mills, 23, of 307 Hay street, Wilkinsburg, testified in her suit for divorce from Charles B. Mills, granted yesterday by Judge James R. Macfarlane, in Common Pleas Court.

"I am going to have a car. If I can't have it here I am going where I can have one."

With this remark, Mrs. Mills said, her husband packed his clothes and left. She said she had worked since her marriage, September 22, 1926, but had planned to quit and asked Mills, who was paying $40 a month on a car, how they could pay the rent and live on his salary and have a machine too. They parted in May, 1929.

WOMAN MISSING FROM HOTEL

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, Me., Dec. 3.—(INS.)—The strange disappearance of a woman who registered at Hotel Fullerton, December 1, as "Louise G. Meade, of Pittsburgh" remained unsolved today.

The woman, well-dressed and about 35, was assigned to a room, stayed in it 15 minutes or less, left the hotel and was last seen walking along the Southport road. Searchers have combed the coastline and countryside without finding a clue to her whereabouts.

Inquiry here has failed to reveal a Pittsburgher known as Louise G. Meade.

HELENE CALLED MATE 'HAM'

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Lowell Sherman, rich film star, didn't mind when his wife, Helene Costello, film actress, tore up her wedding gown and threw her wedding ring at him, but when she called him a "fat old man" and a "ham actor" his ire was aroused, and today he had filed suit to divorce her.

Sherman charged cruelty. They separated after one year and seven months of married life. Sherman asked division of $30,000 worth of community property.

Mrs. Sherman, a sister of Dolores Costello, wife of John Barrymore, kept "trashy and erotic literature in the house," Sherman alleged. She also abused him in the presence of guests, including Mae Murray, actress, and once she threw a highball glass in his face, he said.

Mrs. Sherman often taunted him, Sherman alleged, and last Halloween tried to throw his mother out of the house.

Indications were that the divorce would not be contested, as attorneys for the couple were in conference hoping to arrange an amicable property settlement.

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—With the unemployment caravan en route to Washington from southwestern states scheduled to reach Wheeling tonight, city police were preparing to patrol the streets and to station officers at all bridges leading into West Virginia from Ohio.

Authorities said they had advance notices that the marchers intend to remain here over night after demonstrations in Bellaire and Bridgeport. State police will watch the mining settlements at Elm Grove and deputies will be stationed at various points.

From Wheeling the caravan is to proceed to Pittsburgh, where tomorrow it will join another column of demonstrators.

TROOPS TO STAND BY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Troops will "stand by" for any emergency which may arise when 80 truckloads of "National Hunger Marchers" march on the capital Monday, it was indicated at nearby Fort Myer, Virginia, today.

All leaves of absence for troops stationed there were cancelled today; it was admitted, and the soldiers were ordered to be in "readiness for action" should any disorder develop. Their chances of being called, however, appeared extremely remote because of the preparations being made by the police.

Secretary of War Hurley denied all knowledge of the order cancelling leaves at Fort Myer and said:

"If you think an attempted subsidized march in the capital can cause the War Department any alarm you are mistaken."

SCHWAB VAGUE, BLAMES AGE

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Charles M. Schwab, as a witness in a lawsuit yesterday, got his figures mixed up and sighed:

"Maybe I'm superannuated. I'm 70 years old, you know. I can't remember all these things."

Schwab was called for examination before trial in a suit brought against Morgan, Belmont & Co., brokers and bankers, and James, Speyer & Co., brokers, by Victor Sockice and Michael Kay, who claim $140,000 as commission in the sale by Schwab of 20,000 shares of stock of Chicago Pneumatic Tool Company to Speyer & Co.

Sockice and Kay say they were employed by the two companies in 1927 to negotiate the sale.

Schwab first said he received $160 a share for the stock, but after his memory was refreshed by a letter dealing with the transaction changed the figure to $127.50.

WOMAN SPURS MURDER HUNT

A renewed effort to drag the river for the body of the missing Philip Piazza, 19-year-old bridegroom, was being made today following the story of a woman that she had heard a shot, a splash and the moaning of a man, shortly before midnight Tuesday.

Seeing Henry Reddy, river patrolman, dragging the Allegheny River under the Sixteenth Street Bridge, on the River avenue side, Mrs. Emma Townsend, 38, occupant of a houseboat on the Penn avenue side of the river, told the officer:

"Shortly after I heard the splash, I heard a man groaning. I ran outside to look around but I couldn't see anything. I told the men in the boat because I thought they were dragging the wrong side of the river."

The dragging of the [illegible] terday for the youth, who believed to be the [illegible] latest racket victim, was fruitless.

Piazza's automobile [illegible] ning, doors opened and [illegible] three feet from the [illegible] found Tuesday night on the Sixteenth Street Bridge.

SEEKS REVENGE ON BANDIT

E. N. Andrews of 1144 Dolphman street, McKees Rocks, whose teeth were knocked out during a holdup of his chain store yesterday attempted to return the blow last night when he identified Leo F. Weibel, 26, of 915 Sandusky street, as his assailant at a "standup" in the Detective Bureau. Police prevented trouble.

Weibel, in company with two other suspects, Lester J. and Henry J. Altmeyer, of the North Side, were arrested by Knoxville police Saturday while acting suspiciously near a chain store which have confessed, according to police, to 23 holdups and the theft of $7,000 in loot.

Tells of Shots

MRS. EMMA TOWNSEND

Mrs. Townsend, houseboater whose story of the sound of shots and the splash of a body at Sixteenth Street Bridge has today spurred the police hunt for Philip Piazza, feared city's latest racket murder victim.

COAL SALE PLAN HELD LEGAL

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—Col. William J. Donovan, former assistant United States attorney general, today told Interstate coal operators representing the bulk of the industry that they could legally go ahead with a plan for consolidated sales agencies and physical mergers to facilitate the industry.

Col. Donovan retained to render an opinion on the plan in view of the anti-trust laws, gave his approval before a committee of more than 50 representing coal mines in the 10 states east of the Mississippi.

The plan, details of which were not disclosed, was expected to be approved at today's meeting with few suggested changes.

LIGHT WORKERS SET MARK

The Duquesne Light Company's four power stations yesterday completed a full year without a lost-time accident, officials revealed today.

Almost 700 employes worked a total of 1,700,000 hours during the year.

One group of 300 workers has gone without a single accident since July 21, 1930, another of 50 since November 30, 1929.

The power station department has won two of three inter-departmental safety contests and three out of six special monthly safety campaigns.

F. W. Jones, vice-president and general manager of the light company, and Walter G. Jones, operating manager, were to visit the four stations today to pay tribute to the workmen.

BANDIT BULLET KILLS PASTOR

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (INS)—Innocent victim of gunplay, in which he had no part, the body of the Rev. Amos Over, 49, lay in a second floor flat's sub today while police scoured the city in search of two bandits whose fatal cut at a store caused the accidental killing.

The shooting threw a pall of grief over the pastor's little home where his widow and five fatherless children mourned their bereavement.

M. Over, minister of the non-sectarian Southwest Gospel Tabernacle, was killed when trapped in the cross-fire of the two robbers and the owner of the drug store, Charles W. Kenney.

COUZENS SEEKS UTILITY CURB

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP)—Senator Couzens of Michigan is again going after legislation to bring the big electric combination utilities under government regulation.

He will introduce a bill to establish a communications commission with jurisdiction over telephone, telegraph and radio holding companies. Last year he had a similar bill, but the communications companies would have been brought under the Power Commission together with the electric power holding utilities.

As chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, he may also push legislation to bring the railroad holding companies under Interstate Commerce Committee control together with the operating concerns.

YACHT SLAYER HUNT RENEWED

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—A tangled path leading to a suspect in the "pirate" murder of Benjamin P. Collings on Long Island Sound was being followed today in the hope that it may lead to some light on this baffling case.

Frank Palow, paroled murderer from Walla Walla, Wash., last reported to be engaged in smuggling aliens into the United States from Cuba, is the man sought. But why he should be linked with the mystery has not been revealed.

Lieut. John J. Avery of the Quincy (Mass.) police acting on an unexplained tip, has received fingerprints and photos of Palow and is sending them to District Attorney Rice of Suffolk County.

Mrs. Lillian Collings, who claims two men killed her husband on the yacht Penguin, will be asked to view these pictures to determine if she recognizes Palow as one of the "pirates."

All that has been made public concerning the clues is the fact that Albert D. Hitchcock, arrested in Quincy on a charge of stealing a canoe, gave certain information to Avery which led to the search for Palow. A canoe according to Mrs. Collings was used [illegible] moving her from the Penguin.

The total amount held by banks and individuals, however, remained six hundred million dollars, a year ago.

The bank noted a better feeling throughout the district and attributed it partly to an improved banking condition and upward movement of some commodity prices.

What's New for Evening

In Women's Dresses

Flat crepe and canton crepe, for those who prefer dull surfaces, in vivid Gainsborough blue, Persian purple, jewel red, seraph blue, Dublin green, and mint leaf. And for women who like the lustre of satin under evening lights, may have it in white, shell pink and black.

There are decolletages softly draped, others taking the Vionnet twist, still others outlined with crystal beading. And some frocks are made less formal by capelet effects of beaded chiffon.

must give them shade and water.

Says Mr. Brooks:

"Hogs want to be clean, but men won't give them a chance."

Being a philosopher, he adds:

"You might say the same thing about some unfortunate women."

IF YOU ARE interested in hogs, you should have seen the champion Hampshire Barrow with a white belt around his shoulders, raised by Elmer Bixler, a young boy of Tulare, Cal. Also a pen of Wiltshire Barrows from the Holmes farm at Woodward, Okla., would please you.

They are a new breed with bodies almost as long as a dachshund's. A sign near them reads: "Four extra ribs." The difference between them and old Father Adam suggests itself.

You learn that a very long pig contains a larger percentage of bacon, and that is profitable.

THE SHEEP are beautiful, fascinating, a delight to every farmer that likes his pastures cleared up. Suffolks, with their black faces, are the strangest, handsomest. The caracul sheep from far Asia Minor, you decide that you must have.

That tight caracul curl is lost when the lamb is only three weeks old. The soft caracul lamb fur that looks like watered silk is a commercial horror, representing the sacrifice of a lamb that, like Macbeth, was from its mother's womb untimely ripped. They kill the mother to get the unborn lamb with its soft fur.

The Rambouillets, thick folds of woolly hide above the ram's nose, are the most aristocratic of the sheep.

THE GRAND champion bull of the whole show, Beau Baldwin, a Hereford bred by Wray I. Bergstrom, owned by H. A. Baldwin, of Honolulu, condescends to have his photograph taken with his head close to yours. His horns have been polished so that the pink blood vessels show through. His hair is curled, and the end of his long tail is a beautiful tuft of pure white.

He looks depressed, perhaps because a trip to Los Angeles is not his idea of a good time, perhaps because he has been sold at auction for only $3,000. In boom times, he would have brought $30,000 or $40,000.

YOU WOULD be interested in Clyde Ederkin, who went to France with the Canadian cavalry and now runs in the stock show a machine for changing alfalfa, corn, or oats into meal.

It is so strong that a large piece of granite dropped into it comes out changed to fine dust. This winter will have one of those machines shipped. East Oats ground in that fashion, mixed with cod liver oil, will make wonderful feed for thoroughbred colts and brood mares in a cold winter climate.

WHEN HE WAS in France an officer told Private Ederkin:

"Go and bring over that little bale of hay."

To his amazement, Ederkin found he could not lift it. It had been compressed so tightly, to save space in the ship, that it weighed almost as much as iron.

That kind of press, hydraulic no doubt, might make it possible for those that raise alfalfa in Arizona, the Imperial Valley, and near here on the Mojave Desert, to ship alfalfa hay profitably by rail or through the Panama Canal to the East.

YOU WOULD enjoy that Los Angeles live stock show.

The animals are so solemn and patient, the stock men so concentrated, earnest and devoted that the sight of them makes you ashamed of your own small worries.

They will still be feeding the world thousands of years hence, when some New Zealander will stand on the crumbling ruins of the Empire State Building in New York City, and look down on a flat pile that used to be the Stock Exchange.

Printers Increase Fund for Jobless

An increase from 5 to 8 per cent on their wage assessments to insure continuation of weekly payments to unemployed members was voted by members of Local No. 7, Pittsburgh Typographical Union, yesterday, H. L. Woodmansee, president, and H. B. Clark, secretary, announced.

For a year unemployed married members have been receiving $20 weekly from the union, and unmarried members $12. The increase in the percentage of wage assessments became necessary when the sum allotted each member became threatened by increased unemployment.

Fire Routs Scores From College Hall

DUDLEY, Mass., Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Nearly two score persons, including President James L. Conrad and his wife, fled from the flame-swept Budleigh Hall, main dormitory of the Nichols Junior College, as firemen from three towns battled to bring the flames under control. Damage was estimated at $50,000.

Several students, who returned to the dormitory to retrieve personal belongings, were burned slightly.

SOUTH SIDERS GET CLUB ROOM

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Cafe Story

THE PROPRIETOR of the Paramount Grill, one of the very few successful night cafes in New York today, sat back in his chair and smiled contentedly at his press agent.

"Monte," he asserted amiably, "I feel good."

The publicity man's eyes opened wide.

"I'm very happy to hear it," he returned. "It's great to hear you talk that way. And that reminds me of something I've wanted to speak to you about for some time. My expenses are increasing, and I think that a slight raise—"

•

This is swell, he said. I guess I don't look like a grand kick to make those people look happy. I'm gonna get more of this.

In the fourth audition on the floor the boss said: "Hey, you aren't came upon a most distressing case. There were five in the family, a father who was ill and out of work, a mother who was doing her best to earn a few pennies by washing and ironing, two children who went to school, and a girl of 17 who was in the process.

The mother accepted the basket with all the thanks in her comfortable. And then she was gone before she was finishing the rehearsal. I don't know what we're going to do with the girl, Bess said after she left. Maybe I'll give Mr. Ross a ring and see if he can't find a job for her in the chorus. She would be quite a bad B—there's always room for another and besides I want her.

Etta proved to be the 17-year-old daughter. The proprietor looked her all over with an eye that acquired only 50 years of night club practice. He looked at his press agent, and the latter nodded his confirmation of the approval.

The proprietor cleared his throat.

Madam, he said, I think I can find a job for your daughter. She hasn't had any training in my business, but I'm quite sure she'll get along. Whatever she earns will evidently mean a lot to you, have her drop in to see me tomorrow. Here's my card.

Never was there a mother who was quite as appreciative as this one. She heaped the blessings of the universe upon the proprietor's head and even had a good word for for the press agent. She was on the verge of tears as she stood at the door and thanked them again and again.

Etta will see you tomorrow, she cried. Some day you will have your reward for doing what you have done. You are giving us the chance to live. You are good. Very, very good.

Etta showed up the following day and the proprietor kept his word. The Paramount Grill was rehearsing a new floor show and Etta was immediately given a job in the company. The girl, of course, could do nothing. She was the rankest kind of amateur, and she didn't look any too hot in a costume, either. But that made no difference to the boss. He was looking after her now and woe to anyone who said anything about the kid.

Strangely enough, Etta wasn't any too excited about the work. On her third day of rehearsal she walked over to the boss.

I don't know if mamma's gonna like this, the girl stated. She doesn't like to have me dancing in no night clubs.

The man was astonished.

Why, Etta, he replied, there's no harm in what you're doing. Some of the nicest kids I ever met are in this show. Besides, your mother has to keep you working. What are you going to do without your salary?

You just keep working hard and everything'll be all right. Don't let any of the other girls discourage you. I know you're a little green in this work just yet, but you'll get along fine in time. Just keep plugging along.

The girl would never be successful in any kind of chorus. There wasn't a question in the world about that. She just couldn't learn. But the boss wouldn't fire her from the show. Etta had become his protege.

On the day the show was scheduled to open, Etta disappeared. Without a phone or a word of explanation, she merely failed to show up. The boss didn't know what had happened but he didn't have the opportunity to worry just then. He was too busy with other matters.

Three nights following however, he summoned the press agent.

Monte, he charged, "we've got to get down to that kid's house. I've to find out what's happened to her. Maybe she fell sick or something. I started out on this kid's work and this was my special case. I'm not going to see her go down.

So they went to the flat which the girl lived. They went in to find the same deplorable condition they had first encountered with the exception of the fact that the mother was out on a washing job. Over in a corner sat Etta gazing out of a window.

Etta, cried the boss, "what happened to you? Why didn't you show up for the opening? What made you quit the show when you need money so badly?"

You didn't play fair with me, she muttered.

I what? he howled. "What are you talking about? Didn't I do everything a man could do? Didn't I practically force you into it with a gun to your head? What are you talking about?"

The girl banged the arms of her chair.

"You didn't play fair," she insisted. "Not only did you keep me in the back line, but you didn't even put my picture in the lobby."

OFFICER ADMITS DRUNKEN FRAY

Former Policeman Thomas Robinson, 28, Negro of 407 Jefferson street, North Side, is to be sentenced Friday in Criminal Court by Visiting Judge William T. Darr, after pleading guilty to driving an automobile while intoxicated and discharging his revolver at other police officers.

Witnesses said that on September 25 Robinson parked his car in the middle of Fulton street near Wylie avenue and was shooting. He was not in uniform. Police Lieut. Michael Murphy warned him to be quiet but it was testified he cursed the lieutenant and drew his revolver. Murphy started with him to a patrol box just as two other policemen appeared and Robinson, it was testified, broke away and fired 12 shots at the officers before he was captured after a three-block chase.

Another Suit Filed Over Munhall Blast

Adding to the long list of suits that followed the fatal gas explosion that wrecked the Munhall postoffice December 5, 1929, Barbara Deitzen of Duquesne, filed suit for $25,000 damages against the Equitable Gas Company, entering it in Quarter Sessions Court just two days before the two-year statute of limitations would have expired. She says she was a passenger on the street car which was wrecked while passing the postoffice at the time of the accident and that her face was cut and her left leg injured.

Former Clerk Jailed For Robbing Mail

James F. Rosella, 30, of Turrett street, a former clerk in the Wilkinsburg postoffice, was sentenced by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson to serve four months in jail, when he pleaded guilty to stealing a letter containing $4 on June 24.

Guiseppi Giannette received a 30-day jail sentence when he pleaded guilty of making a false affidavit before immigration officials in making application for a re-entry permit.

DON'T TRIFLE WITH A COLD

Break It Up In a Jiffy With Something You KNOW Does the Job

THE thing to do with a cold is to break it up in a hurry—with something you know does the job: not to trifle with a lot of trick ideas and remedies. Colds are too dangerous to experiment with.

Get a box of Hill's Cascara Quinine at any drug store. Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all.

Soon that miserable aching feeling begins to go. The cold breaks up. The poisons are moved from your system. The world looks like an altogether different place.

Those results come because Hill's goes back to first principles by going to the seat of the trouble. It's not a newfangled fancy idea but a tried and proved way that's made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy.

Hill's costs only a few cents. Use it for quick relief after everything else you've tried has failed.

JINGLES PRAISE GOOD LANDLORD

In "Christmas Jingle" No. 15 there was an incomplete message about the lenient landlord. Sun-Telegraph readers submitted hundreds of last lines, most of which maintained that the "landlord named Wood" was surely doing "a lot of good," but James Titler, of Hiller, Pa., carried the slant at this particular jingle that seemed to command, more than any others, the attention of the judges. They awarded him the $5 prize for a last line that completed No. 15, as follows:

A popular Landlord named Wood
Owned homes in a poor neighborhood,
Out of pure charity
He housed many folks free
And fed them as much as he could.

The five $1 prize winners were Helen R. Wilkinson, 7 Sheridan avenue, Bellevue; Agnes Linkhauer, 126 Friendship street, Duquesne; Margaret L. Barcroft, Western and Forest avenues, Emsworth; Katherine Hazlett, 1667 Potomac avenue, Dormont; and H. E. MacNamara, 3167 Beechwood boulevard.

Try your hand on No. 22 appearing on this page today. If you submit what the judges think is the best of all "last lines" sent in you get a check for $5. The five next best "last lines" will each be awarded $1.

All readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, with the exception of employes, are invited to enter the "Christmas Jingle" contest. You can send in as many last lines as you like. Equal awards will be paid to readers whose answers are tied in the judging. You do not have to buy a Sun-Telegraph to enter this contest. You may examine the files of this newspaper at the public library or at any one of the offices of the Sun-Telegraph, where you may make a tracing of the "Christmas Jingles" blank if you wish.

Each Sun-Telegraph "Christmas Jingle" will be consecutively numbered.

North Side Autoists Advised of Route

City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre today advised North Side motorists who formerly have been making left turns from south on Sixth street to east on Liberty avenue to use the Seventh and Ninth street bridges in entering downtown. This advice is given in view of the 60-day trial ban of automobile left turns at the intersection. The ban is designed as a pedestrian safety measure.

The intersection of Sixth and Market streets with Liberty avenue is the third heaviest pedestrian intersection in the city and is considered the most difficult for the police to cope with, McIntyre said.

Auto Death Trial Exonerates Driver

Robert Shearn, Jr., 21, 206 South Euclid avenue, was free today of a charge of involuntary manslaughter, having been ordered acquitted by Judge Harry H. Rowand, in Criminal Court, after evidence failed to show him guilty of criminal negligence or recklessness.

He was placed on trial for the death of Harold A. Heron, 20, 5162 Columbo street, July 11, when Shearn's automobile was wrecked against a culvert on Route 80, Penn Township. Witnesses testified Shearn had been driving at moderate speed and was forced off the road by the blinding headlights of an approaching car.

2 Killed, 32 Hurt In Belgian Wreck

BRUSSELS, Dec. 3.—Two persons were dead today and 32 others were suffering from injuries as a result of a collision of two Antwerp-Lille express trains at Otterbek. Railroad officials said no Americans were among the victims.

Oliver P. Scaife III Honored at Yale

Scaife is a junior and a graduate of Arnold School, Braddock avenue, in the class of 1928. He is the third Arnold School graduate to be similarly honored in the past three years, the others being John G. Stevenson III and Morton B. Curley, both of Pittsburgh.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Dec. 3.—Mayor James J. Walker of New York arrived at this seacoast resort city today to spend a few days in relaxation after his strenuous efforts on behalf of Tom Mooney of San Francisco.

Mayor Walker expects to be back in New York in about a week. On the train East he plans to visit at Albuquerque, N. M., where representatives of 26 tribes are arriving to honor Chief Big Heart by making him Chief Big Heart.

INDIAN HONORS

Before he boarded the train for Santa Barbara, Mayor Walker received a telegram from Clyde ... Albuquerque, N. M., which read in part:

"Representatives of 26 tribes of Indians from all parts of New Mexico will unite in making you Chief Big Heart. This invitation is submitted in no idle gesture.

"Albuquerque was a going concern three centuries before the issuance of first filling station permit.

"Honors conferred will make Will Rogers jealous because we only made him chief of Navajo tribe and will worry Charles Curtis until he finds out New Mexico Indians cannot vote in national election. We will make this occasion impressive and important."

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—(AP)—A crew of piano movers and a special hoisting apparatus were to be employed today for the funeral and burial of Charles Bush, 49, whose weight was 632 pounds.

BANDITS STRIP GAMBLERS

There wasn't a word on police records about it, but in gambling circles today the story was accepted without dispute: the story of how three East End gamblers, so-called card sharks, were convinced they should remain out of Bloomfield.

They had invaded Bloomfield's gambling precincts with ... and success when they were ... to remove themselves.

Shortly ... returned. And the place was held up. Previously ... was robbed but the three invaders were not only robbed of their money but also of their clothes.

LAUD PONSELLE IN NEW OPERA

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP)—La Notte di Zoraima, new one-act opera by Italo Montemezzi, was presented for the first time in America last night at the Metropolitan Opera House and it received an ovation lasting nearly eight minutes.

Rosa Ponselle, who sang the title role, took her curtain call to cries of "bravo."

Mrs. Montemezzi, daughter of former Mayor Leith of Asbury Park, N. J., was in the audience.

The opera received its world premiere at the La Scala Opera House in Milan last winter and was enthusiastically received there. It has modern music melodious and dramatic.

Mario Chiaiberti wrote the book. The setting is in Peru after the flight of the Inca army before the invading Spaniards.

BANKHEAD VOTE REPORT FILED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP)—On findings of universal disregard for election laws and circumstances indicating "some fraud," Chairman Hastings, of the Senate Election Subcommittee today formally questioned the validity of the Alabama election which sent John H. Bankhead to the Senate.

The Republican Senator from Delaware laid a bulky factual report without recommendations before his committee as it gathered to permit counsel for Bankhead and the contestant, former Senator J. Thomas Heflin, to argue disputed points.

The chairman has indicated he would have some recommendations for the committee later in closed session. After this group acts the entire Elections Committee must study the report and then it will be up to the Senate. Indications so far have been that Bankhead would be seated next week, the contest coming up later.

2 Face Bandit Quiz On Victim's Dreams

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—(INS)—On the basis of two dreams, Harry Dalken and Frank Helmick, both 19, were under investigation today. Charles Krangel was the dreamer. He told a police judge he dreamed twice that Dalken and Helmick were the robbers who held him up and took $217 from him. The judge ordered a check of the accused youths' movements on the night of the robbery. Krangel, who works in the same place with Dalken and Helmick, was held up from behind and did not see the robbers.

Ex-Ohio Governor Considers New Race

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Myers Y. Cooper, former Governor of Ohio, said yesterday he was giving "the most serious consideration" to requests that he be a candidate for the office again.

The entrance of Cooper into the race for the Republican nomination would make it a three-cornered affair, Davis S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Clarence J. Brown having already announced their candidacies.

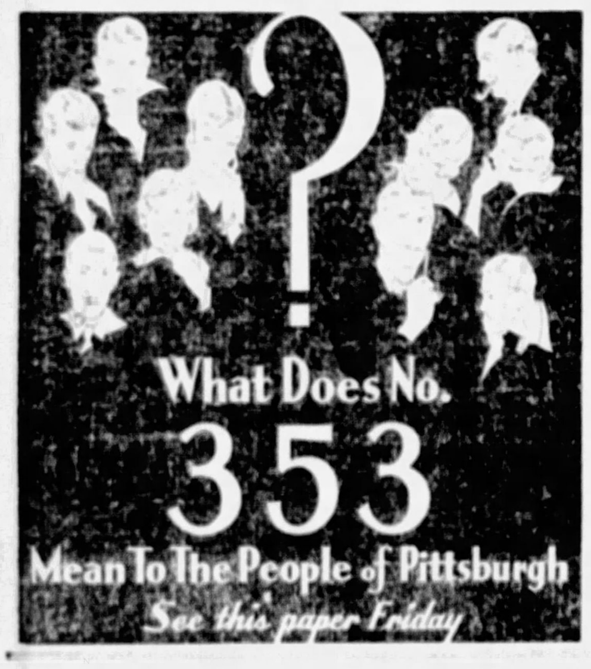
Divorce Moratorium Set Over Christmas

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 3.—(AP)—With the expressed hope that application of the Christmas spirit may heal marital difficulties, District Judge Robert J. McDonough has declared a moratorium on divorce hearings from December 18 until January 4.

Children, he declared, are entitled to enjoy the holidays without being deprived of either of their parents.

Oil Well 'Shooter' Injured in Crash

WARREN, Pa., Dec. 3.—(AP)—Hugh Ulman, 30, of Bradford, was killed and F. J. Olmstead, well-known oil well "shooter" of Clarendon, was injured early today when their car, driven by Olmstead, crashed into the rear of a heavy truck near Ludlow.



Watch Her, Mother — She Needs You

Despondent Young Girls

SHE LOOKS despondent, worn-out and depressed. Young girls budding into womanhood often get wistful. They should be watched.

"I have a headache," they quietly complain. "My back bothers me. ... I guess I'll lie down."

During this "trying time" every young girl needs the helpful benefit of a strengthening medicine like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Neglect now only invites suffering later on. Pain destroys beauty.

That's why so many attractive young women become faded prematurely. The pretty girl of 18 often becomes a languid lady of 25.

When your daughter becomes tired and listless ... won't you give her Vegetable Compound Tablets ... just as other mothers do?

The very fact that it's been in use a long, long time, gives women extra confidence. They know it must be good ... or so many women wouldn't take it.

And how true that is! For our records show that 98 out of every 100 women report benefit.

Ask your Druggist for a bottle of either the tablets or the liquid today. Don't postpone the blessed relief this medicine brings.

BOMBS BLAMED ON GAMBLERS

PEORIA, Ill., Dec. 3—(AP)—Three bombs exploded last night in an outbreak of violence in what police described as a gambling war.

The most powerful of the three blasts wrecked a portion of the Windsor gambling house in the downtown section, injuring three men in the place. Several shoppers were cut by glass and windows of buildings within a block.

In an earlier bombing some damage was done to the Harrison Bridge Club in the Levee district.

Another bomb exploded against the basement wall of the home of Rex G. Howard, a business supply dealer. Police could not explain the attack on Howard.

Friendly Explanation Better Than Firm Refusal

Dolly's 14—and she thinks that ma's an old meanie!

Nothing very new about that situation. Ma herself thought the same thing when she was 14 and her ma wouldn't let her go gallivanting all around the lot.

But, somehow, ma seems to never remember that fact!

Queer—but just as soon as the average female becomes a mother she proceeds to forget all her own girlhood tantrums. Then she wonders why she and her little girl can't come to a Lovely Understanding. That is what ails this perfectly nice mother today and many another who will read her tale.

ASSOCIATES OLDER

"Dear Sally Martin:—

"Maybe you can help me as you have helped others. I have a problem which has me stumped. I just can't seem to figure out how to handle it.

"I am the mother of a girl who is just 14 years old—a dear girl who does more than good work at school and is neat at home and helpful to me.

"But at 14 she—Dolly I will call her—looks and acts like a girl of 16. She is big and being advanced in school she is in second year high; the girls she is thrown with are older than she.

"Therefore she thinks she ought to be able to do as they do—that is, to attend parties and dances and accept rides from various boys who have cars. But this last I have strictly forbidden her to do.

"I don't mind the parties so much. They are always at some home. Nor do I object to having her spend a week-end now and then at the home of some friends who are nice people. This summer the youngsters have been going on picnics in the evening and going swimming. We have taken her several times to these affairs and when we got there we have left her with her friends but have remained on the spot so we can go home together.

EXPLANATION IS BEST

"She just can't seem to understand that not reason is that we think she is too young to start going out alone. She gets mad, and says we don't trust her.

"Please do tell me do you think I am doing what is right? Or am I putting a ball and chain on her as she thinks? How can I make her understand that we are only trying to protect her?

"JUST A MOTHER."

That is a problem, my dear, isn't it? It's a problem that every mother must meet when her youngsters begin to grow out of childhood.

And you are right, of course. No girl of 14 years should be allowed to run around as much as her giddy young self would like.

But, dear, how to explain to her why she can't—that's another matter. Is there not a happiness that may be ahead for her if she doesn't rush or warp that growth? Appeal to her pride. Arouse her imagination. Make her feel that she is just protecting her own health and happiness instead of catering to your whims.

And, little by little, give her more freedom. Trust her. She has proven her right to that trust by her fine advancement in school. She has unusual intelligence. Then respect that intelligence. Treat her as a Reliable Party and the chances are she'll act like one.

FORBIDDING IS CLUMSY

Forbidding is a clumsy and irritating method of getting the other fellow to agree with you. It seldom results in enthusiastic cooperation. One friendly explanation is worth a million flat forbiddings, even though the forbidding be based on far better reason.

And a youngster has as much right to explanations as an adult. That's something the average parent is apt to overlook.

"Why can't I do it, Ma?" whines some rebellious youngster.

Because I said so! That's why! Shape a heckled parent.

FREEDOM INVOLVED

Then, if the youngster is worth a punch of salt, he goes out and does it anyway. And with all due regard for parental authority, Ma has wished that disobedience on herself.

For the youngster has a right to know why. His freedom is involved. His individuality is challenged. His pride is affronted. And the pride of a child, if that child is ever to amount to anything, is a very delicate affair.

Tell Dolly why you don't want her to run around, my dear. Tell her the story of her own growth. Tell her of the happiness that may be ahead for her if she doesn't fight or warp that growth. Appeal to her pride. Arouse her imagination. Make her feel that she is just protecting her own health and happiness instead of catering to your whims.

And, little by little, give her more freedom. Trust her. She has proven her right to that trust by her fine advancement in school. She has unusual intelligence. Then respect that intelligence. Treat her as a Reliable Party and the chances are she'll act like one.

Bejeweled Girl Not Envied Half as Much as She Imagines—Fay King

By FAY KING

She goes to shop swathed in her fine furs and sparkles with her diamond brooches and bracelets.

She gets a kick out of imagining how much she is envied by the "poor little shop girls," who admire her finery as a form of flattery they know she expects.

But the truth is she is not envied half as much as she imagines.

If she would look closely and think a little more of them than she does of herself she would observe a sparkle in their eyes that outshines her costliest jewel.

It is a sparkle that comes from a happy heart that is in love with the right boy and wants nothing beyond his love, his means and his wedding ring.

Madge's Indifference to Telegram Prompts "Lecture"

You don't need to give me three guesses. Mary said as I turned from the telephone after instructing the Western Union operative to send over the telegram signed Philip Verliten. I told you I had a prophetic soul. Isn't that wire from the Verlitens pere et fils?

There was an edge in her voice which told me that she had not yet forgiven Noel for the letter telling her of the daughter of Philip Verliten's best friend—a man whose death had much affected the great producer and of the literary companionship which the girl was giving the young musician. Lillian and I had been amused at her anger, but selfishly pleased as well for it had impelled her to promise to accompany Marion on the weekend party which the Braxtons were staging—the atrocious slang of the girls.

You are a true phophetess this time, Mary. I told her with a lightness I was far from feeling. The wire was from Philip Verliten.

Was it marked 'urgent'? Lillian asked gravely, for she, Katherine and Marion were standing with Mary in the hall, exhibiting the interest with which all members of a family generally regard a telegram.

Yes, it was.

"Can you beat it, or even tie it?" Lillian apostrophized the others. "This aplomb this indifferent-ism! The greatest play producer in the world sends a budding aspirant a telegram marked 'urgent,' and she won't take the time to listen to it over the telephone, just tells 'em to send it down. Any time within the next day or two—why didn't you tell 'em?"

There was real exasperation in her voice, and I suddenly questioned the wisdom of my hasty decision.

"I don't have to tell 'em. That girl will probably take a day or two anyway, judging from her drawl."

"And you're not going to reconsider your decision?" Lillian said with a keen look at my face. "Well, don't say I didn't warn you if old Phil suddenly decides he doesn't want your play after all. And don't expect me to buy any lead pencils or shoe strings when you start out with your little tin cup, for I shall be adamant! Gosh, ad-a-mant! But you might consider little Mary's feelings. How do you know but what the 'urgent' part concerns young Noel?"

"See if I care if it does," Mary said with a defensive hardness in her voice. "As far as I'm concerned that message can wait until next week after next."

But I knew that she was whistling in the dark, and that in reality she would give much to know what was in the telegram. But my disinclination to listen to it was proof against even the sudden wish to relieve her mind.

"I agree with you, Mary," I said briskly, "and now if you don't mind, I'm going out on the veranda until dinner time. I haven't been outdoors since morning."

"Good idea," Katherine said heartily, and I went down to the veranda where Lillian joined me a minute later.

"I know what happens to the meddlesome Matties of this old world," she said, "but won't you let Harry drive me down to get that telegram? I can understand your not wanting it read over the telephone, but honestly, old dear, a telegram marked 'urgent' from old Phil isn't anything to play marbles with, unless you really don't care anything about your dramatic future. And I'm saying this with a full appreciation of your reluctance to see him or hear from him. However, if you won't, you won't, but don't be mad by me!"

"But I will," I said with sudden resolution, for it is a rare occasion indeed when I flout Lillian's judgment. "I'll telephone immediately that you're coming after it."

But when I called the telegraph office, the operator informed me proudly that the message was on the way, and it was but a few minutes later that the boy came up the steps with it. But to my dismay, Dicky came around the house at the same instant, stopping short as he saw the boy hand me the yellow envelope.

"Another telegram?" he said with an unpleasant intonation in his voice. "You're getting to be as popular as a prom-trotter."

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Do the Correct Thing

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am a high school student 17 years of age. I received a birthday present from a young boy and as I have known him for six years, would it be proper for me to return the compliment on his birthday?

2. This same boy has asked me to come to his home sometime to meet his mother and his four brothers. Would it be correct for me to go? His family is not acquainted with mine. E. S.

1. Yes, if you make your gift in good taste . . . a well chosen book, say, or a box of letter paper, or a re-fill pencil. Don't make your gift an elaborate one or an expensive one.

2. Yes, this would be a charming thing to do if his mother extends the invitation, but you should not go without an invitation from the hostess, the mother. If the boy doesn't seem to think that this is necessary, tell him, quite directly that you would very much like to come to his home if his mother will write you an invitation to come with him. Both the boy and his mother will respect you for knowing that this is the correct thing, dear girl, so don't feel hesitant about doing it. It is often done. Even if the family hasn't realized that this is the correct gesture for you to make, they will see that it is, when you make your request for an invitation from the mother.

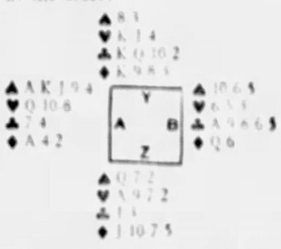
The following hand illustrates the occasional great utility of an informatory double of a high declaration.

Z opened contracting with 1-Spade on a hand only a little below strength calling for 2-Spades. A passed, Y jumped to 3-Spades upon great trump length, two doubletons, and a side king, hoping to shut B out. With his rock-crusher worth seven assisting tricks, B made an informatory double, trusting his partner might find something worth a game. Z jumped into 4-Spades, but brave little A could not be shut-out; he bid 5-Diamonds, was doubled, and made his contract. Neither side was vulnerable; defeating Z's contract, two tricks doubled would have been less profitable than going game, even if the 5-Diamonds had not been doubled. Of course, A did not have to bid over Z's intervening declaration of 4-Spades, but his void spades plus his long suit and confidence in B made him declare.

As shown in the next hand, an informatory double may be made, and partner's bid may be assisted, expecting to go down a little, rather than allow opponents to hold an unchallenged low contract that means game at the score.



Z passed; A bid 1-Spade at a score of 70 on his second game; Y-Z had neither score nor previous game. Y made an informatory double; B passed; Z bid 2-Hearts. A bid 2-Spades, which Y ventured to overcall with 3-Hearts. Both B and Z passed and A allowed the declaration to stand. Z lost two spade tricks, two diamond tricks and one club trick, paying a penalty of only 50 points for saving the rubber.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Science Progresses in Treating Varicose Veins

Varicose veins are now treated by a new and simple method. Previously the victim of the trouble was likely to neglect it. He did this because he feared the operation. In the old-fashioned operation the veins were actually stripped from the leg. As a result of this radical procedure the patient was made an invalid for many weeks, requiring a good deal of attention. In addition, the scars left by the operation were often unsightly and for long afterward were the seat of pain.

Dr. Copeland

Now varicose veins may be treated in a different manner. They are disposed of by the "injection method," a substance being introduced directly into the vein.

Varicose veins are frequently found in stout persons, particularly those who stand on the feet a great deal. Occupation is always an important factor.

In Japan this ailment is uncommon. It is easy to understand why. Most of those who work in that country do so while in a sitting posture. Orientals who come to this country develop varicose veins as readily as the natives. Their work here requires that they stand on their feet.

Pregnancy has always been a common cause of this condition. As a result of the increase in weight and the pressure placed on the veins they become varicose.

Another cause, often overlooked, is the wearing of tight garters or elastics. This practice has been shown to be a frequent cause of varicose veins.

The injection method of treatment is simple and safe. In a recent review of over 53,000 cases, the results reported have been gratifying.

The advocates of this treatment say it is not only safer than operation, but no scars are left and there is no pain. The hospital experience is saved because the treatment is given in the office or clinic. It does not interfere with the ordinary duties.

This ailment is one which should not be neglected. When varicose veins are neglected the condition becomes progressively worse.

There are no medications that can be taken by mouth, no appliances, no applications which will cure this condition. There are only two methods of treatment. The first is the old-fashioned surgical method in which the vein is actually removed. The second is the new method of injecting the vein which I have told you about today.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

PATSY IS GONE . . . The pet bulldog of John McCloy, KDKA market editor, has disappeared and John is more than a little perturbed. . . . Patsy had a nice soft spot near the radio in John's Regent Square home where she lay indifferently while music and speeches were broadcast, but immediately John spoke she recognized her master's voice and pawed the loudspeaker. When Patsy was only a pup, John brought her into KDKA studios in a shoebox. . . . She came to know most of the staff and performed many tricks for them.

Walter Sickles, WWSW baritone, wrote a song, "Blue Persian Moon" . . . Bob Lightner played it, was deeply impressed and has decided to make a recording of it when he takes the band to New York.

Sponsors of John Comerford, KQV tenor, are to drop 25 parachutes from an airplane flying over downtown Pittsburgh Saturday, each parachute entitling the finder to a new overcoat . . . and are we happy? . . . we've been invited to handle the stick.

No Studios in Gulf

Speaking of airplanes, we journeyed to the top of the Good Gulf Building yesterday and after gaining 575 feet altitude surveyed Pittsburgh from the top of the tower which supports the large concrete ball-ots to be painted gold. . . . We thought at the time what a unique broadcast it would make for some Pittsburgh station to send a reporter up on the construction elevator to paint a word picture of the city floor by floor and to tell how it feels to stand on the ledge of the cupola where pigeons are pigeons and a misstep means eternity. . . . We discovered incidentally that the floor plan for radio studios has been changed, and that means that neither KDKA nor WWSW is to have a home in the tallest of Pittsburgh structures. . . . E. F. Appel, assistant engineer of the Gulf Refining Company, confirmed our suspicion by stating that all radio plans have been discarded temporarily.

Question a Day:

We like Marion Harris. Please describe her.—Front Office, Stanley Building.

Answer—Marion is a beautiful little lady with sad eyes and a throaty voice. Southern. Weighs 115. Five feet four and three-quarter inches tall. Yellow hair and big, frank brown eyes. Never swims, prefers to let others walk around the golf courses, hates bridge and likes to sleep.

The Good Old Days

Those were the Good Old Days when Freddie Rich played a rickety piano in an East Side nickelodeon; when Ben Bernie demonstrated fiddles in a New York department store; when Irene Beasley taught school; when Jacques Renard played violin for Pavlowa; when Tony Wons tended furnace; when Eddie Duchin was a pharmacist; when Noble Sissle was one-half of Sissle and Blake; when Kate Smith sang for the soldiers bound for "Over There;" when Morton Downey was fired from a job in an installment furniture store; when George Hall directed the orchestra for Fritzi Scheff at the old Palais Royale in New York; when Fred Berrens was noted in vaudeville for his female impersonation act; when Ben Alley worked as a road-paver in his native West Virginia; when the Mills Brothers entertained on the streets of Piqua, Ohio; when Bing Crosby clerked in a law office in Spokane, Washington.

But they'll take the present.

Colds on the chest mean congestion. This congestion in bronchial tubes and air passages must be relieved by bringing fresh blood to the congested parts. The deeply penetrating quality of BAUME BENGUE (pronounced Ben-Gay) stimulates outer chest circulation, lessening deeper congestion and bringing prompt relief.

THE LOUDSPEAKER By Louis Reid

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—There's a new clash of Wagner and Tschaikowsky upon the night air. And it comes from the great Northwest, where heretofore men were merely men. Now they are fiddlers. Adjusting their fiddles to the more familiar classics, these men are demonstrating that radio's best music need not be concentrated in the East.

Once a week the Minneapolis Symphony is on the air. For a half hour only. A teasing half hour, though it has its compensations. For one thing no complex music by dead and forgotten composers clutters its racks. Nor are its programs interrupted by long-winded commentators.

The Minneapolis band certainly is not the most important musical organization now agitating the air. But its presence seems to us to bring especially into the clear, white light of publicity One of the most startling romances of the radio. It is none other than the rise to the peaks of Eugene Ormandy, once a lovely violinist of a movie theater orchestra. For Budapest-born Ormandy, whose career in America has been almost wholly confined to the microphones, is the leader of the Minneapolis Symphony.

* * *

A canny fellow, Ormandy, who knows what he wants and proceeds to get it. Right now he is emphasizing the name of Ormandy rather than that of Minneapolis, knowing that it will lead probably to bigger and better contracts. Before each number you hear are announcers saying: "Eugene Ormandy Presents."

* * *

Ormandy's rise to the top is a matter of 10 short years. In 1921 he came to America from a land torn by war, which offered nothing more for him musically, got a job in the orchestra of the Capitol Theater then under the direction of Roxy. Radio recruited him at once as a member of the Roxy gang. He has never been away from radio since. As a member of this group he gave the first violin solo on the air. For four years he fiddled away his time on the overtures and ballet music that the better movie orchestras go in for before his work merited his appointment as an associate conductor.

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Just compare the Freshness!

CAMELS are never parched or toasted

THERE is one infallible way to test the benefits of true freshness in a cigarette: smoke a Camel.

See how light and fragrant it is, how delicately mild, how smooth and friendly to the throat.

See how ripe and mellow are its flavors, how distinctive its bouquet, how suave and cool is its slow-burning solace.

That's what true freshness means in the goodness of really fine tobaccos—choice, mild, sun-ripened tobaccos--the only kind that find their way into Camels.

The fine tobaccos in Camels are never parched or toasted — the Reynolds method of scientifically applying heat guarantees against that.

That's why Camels are fresh to start with, fresh with natural moisture — and why the Camel Humidor Pack can deliver them to you fresh to smoke.

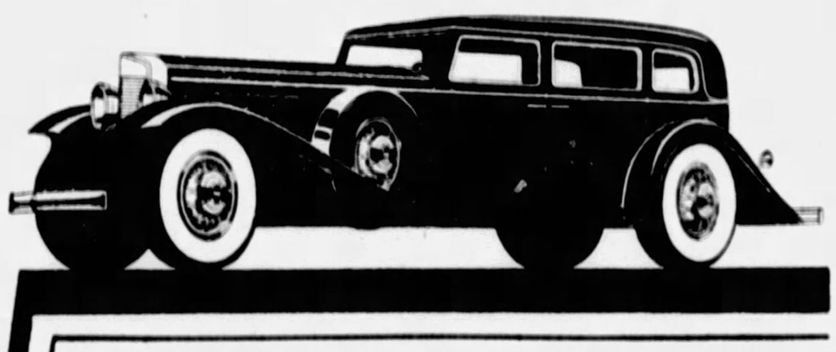
MARMON SIXTEEN
NATIONAL SALON SHOWING
December 2nd to 9th Inclusive



The Marmon Sixteen, one of the few really great motor cars of all time, is presented locally at an unusual exhibit of body styles of custom design. This display is by special arrangement with the Marmon factory, and is a part of a National Salon Program now in progress in principal cities. Powered by the famous 200-horsepower all-aluminum engine designed by Howard Marmon, the Marmon Sixteen has been accepted as a truly different motor car—possessed of a performance that literally is without parallel on the road. In appearance, too, the Marmon Sixteen is a complete advancement. Its beauty forecasts a new era of motor car design. Wheelbase 145 inches. Complete range of body styles.

GREAT NEW STOCK CAR RECORD
1834 Miles in 24 Hours on Indianapolis Motor Speedway

Most recent among the achievements of the Marmon Sixteen was the great new stock car record established on the famous Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Traveling 1834 miles in 24 continuous hours, a standard closed Sixteen won the Stevens Challenge Trophy—exceeding the former record by 191 miles. The entire event was under the official supervision of the American Automobile Association.

WOMAN ADMITS HANGING MATE

FT PAYNE, Ala., Dec. 3.—(AP)—A frail 42-year-old woman who told police she lassoed her husband with a rope which caused his death by choking and her 12-year-old son were placed in jail yesterday charged with murder.

Mrs. Willie Roberts and her son by a former marriage, Albert Wood, were arrested after the woman led officers to a bin in the rear of her home where the body of William Roberts, 55, was found buried beneath a pile of cottonseed.

Mrs. Roberts told Sheriff Pope she fashioned a noose out of a rope and slipped it over her husband's head early last Sunday when he attempted to attack her son with a knife.

She said her husband ran into the back yard as he tugged at the rope and finally collapsed.

NEW ACTIVITIES FOR FALK CLINIC

The new Falk Clinic engaged in added activity today as the free dispensary, nutrition clinic and laboratory work of the Children's Hospital were transferred to the recently opened unit of the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center.

There were 158 visitors at the final dispensary day at the Children's Hospital, bringing the total visits for the first six months of the present hospital year, ending 13,217, an increase of 3,174 over the previous year. In the corresponding period in 1929 the number of visits was 9,537.

Dr. Thomas S. Arbuthnot, president of the Children's Hospital, said the entire staff of nurses assigned to the dispensary and the staff of doctors were transferred to the new quarters.

Complaint Against Renaldo Dismissed

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3.—(AP)—A fugitive complaint against Duncan Renaldo, film actor, was dismissed by a superior judge terminating a complaint that he abandoned his child in destitute circumstances in Queens County, New York.

The District Attorney's office announced Gov. James Rolph, Jr., had refused to order the actor's extradition after Renaldo established he contributed regularly to the child's support, paying nearly $3,000 in the last year.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement don't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul; skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist substitutes. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Work Started on $362,243 Westinghouse High Annex

BANKS DISTRIBUTE $2,000,000 CHRISTMAS FUNDS

SCHOOL ANNEX PROVIDES JOBS FOR 200

New Quarters to Provide For 825 More Students; $7,000 Homewood Repairs

Five contracts have been awarded and work is under way on the new $362,243 annex to the Westinghouse High School. The project will give work to 200 men and should be completed by November 25, 1932.

The general contract for the building was awarded to the Navarro Company, whose bid was $271,500.

The heating and ventilating went to Bartley-O'Neil for $47,750; plumbing was awarded to Snively Plumbing and Heating Company for $28,543, and lighting and electric work to Best Light Company at $14,450. A contract to install unit heaters for $7,350 went to B. F. Sturtevant Company, this figure being included in the Bartley-O'Neil bid.

The extension, designed by Ingham and Boyd, architects, will be in two wings containing 28 classrooms, one business practice and bookkeeping room, a typewriting room and a gymnasium. One of the wings will extend from the main building on Monticello street and the other on Hermitage street.

The school's capacity will be increased by 825 new students when the extension is completed.

As a result of fire in the Homewood School a short time ago the school board has planned to spend $7,000 for its repair. The students have not been transferred to other schools, as the three badly damaged rooms have been shut off and studies are continued in the rest of the building.

The new Lincoln School has been opened and for the first time in 61 years the old building is empty.

JUVENILE COURT GIRLS' HOME HELD UNFIT

Homewood Clubwomen, Vote League to Lead Protests; Heating Declared Faulty

The Homewood Woman's Club, Thirteenth Ward League of Women Voters and representatives of other civic organizations of the East End are planning to protest to the new Board of County Commissioners concerning the equipment and quarters of the Juvenile Detention Home for Girls, on Forbes street, termed as inadequate.

The protest will be presented to the Commissioners by Mrs. P. C. Walker, chairman of the civic and legislative committee of the Woman's Club and chairman of the League of Women Voters.

Following a recent inspection of the home, Mrs. Walker said:

"There is not enough room for the number of girls and women held there. Frequently young children are placed with older girls and women. The floors are covered with broken linoleum and the house is heated with a pipeless furnace."

MUNHALL LETS SEWER AWARD

Munhall Council has awarded a contract for 11 miles of sewer line in the district east of Main street, Homestead Park, for approximately $100,000, to the McCrady Construction Company, one of 14 bidders.

Construction will start within the next 10 days. The contract calls for completion before 150 days.

With the completion of the line, the end of the borough's most ambitious improvement projects will come to a close. In the past two years, Munhall has made improvements totalling over $2,000,000.

All homes in the borough, including the newly annexed Homestead Park district, will have the facilities of the new system.

Since last spring the borough has been working on the sewer system in order to relieve conditions in the Homestead Park district. Many miles of pipe line have been constructed and two new pumps and a building were added to the West Penn Pumping Station. In three months the system will be complete.

The contract calls for the construction of lateral sewers as well as the main sewer. The trunk line will be built along the east side of Main street and will flow into the Whitaker sewer at Twenty-second and Ravine streets, Munhall.

SAVINGS CHECKS SPUR HOLIDAY SHOPPING

35,000 Residents of East District Share Yuletide Distribution of Money

More than $2,000,000 in Christmas savings club and "purpose club" checks will have been distributed to approximately 35,000 residents of East communities by Saturday.

The City Deposit Bank and Trust Company, of East Liberty, will make the largest single distribution, one of $286,000.

Banks in the Braddock and Turtle Creek districts, as far west as Swissvale and east as far as Pitcairn, within the past three days mailed to their depositors checks totaling approximately $500,000. The amount, it is expected, will be spent largely in the local districts for Christmas shopping and other holiday purposes.

Banks and the approximate amounts mailed to Christmas Savings club members are:

Braddock National, $100,000; First National Bank of Braddock, $75,000; First National Bank of Swissvale, $60,000; East Pittsburgh Savings and Trust Company, $60,000; Rankin Bank, $20,000; Turtle Creek Savings and Trust Company, $60,000; First National Bank of Wilmerding, $50,000; First National Bank of Pitcairn, $15,000; Peoples National Bank of Pitcairn, $15,000.

Checks totaling $167,500 will have been sent out by the Monongahela Trust Company and the First National Bank, both of Homestead, and the Hays Bank.

$90,000 of Bank Funds Paid in East Pittsburgh

More than $90,000 is being received by depositors of the closed Peoples State Bank of East Pittsburgh as a result of an order signed in the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court Tuesday.

Checks for 50 per cent payment have been mailed out in the last two days and another payment of from 45 to 50 per cent will be made within a few weeks. Deputy Attorney General Glick asked that an order be signed confirming the accounting of the receivers of the bank, closed on February 4. Judge Elder W. Marshall made the confirmation.

BRADDOCK SEAL SALE STARTS

Mrs. Clarence E. Bair is directing the work of the Braddock Christmas Seal Committee, which will conclude its sale of tuberculosis health stamps Christmas. Money received from the sale of the stamps will be devoted to Braddock health and anti-tuberculosis work.

The Tuberculosis League has announced that poverty and undernourishment have doubled the number of tuberculosis sufferers this winter.

Seals are being mailed to residents of Braddock, North Braddock and Rankin by the Woman's Club of Braddock.

Port Eckles, superintendent of Homestead schools, is chairman of the Homestead Christmas Seal Committee, which opened its seal campaign Christmas Day. Money received for the seals will be devoted to the open air school for delicate children and the dental clinic.

Bloomfield Group To Ask Repaving

The Bloomfield Board of Trade will ask City Council to repave the 4600 block of Liberty avenue, as soon as a special appointment with Council can be arranged. Board officials in making this announcement said that their resolution will explain that ruts between street car tracks have caused several serious accidents and resulted in damage to homes in the vicinity because of the vibration caused by heavy trucks.

Church Year Opens At Sacred Heart

The ecclesiastical year was opened Sunday morning in Sacred Heart Church, Shady avenue, with a solemn mass at 11 o'clock, in which a vested choir of men and boys participated.

The Rev. Dr. Howard J. Carroll was celebrant, assisted by the Rev. V. I. Kennedy, the Rev. E. Lawrence O'Connell and the Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Coakley.

Woman, 93, Recalls Battlefield and Romance

Seventy-eight years ago, a little girl, wearing her first "grown-up" dress and still conscious that she had but recently discarded her "pigtails," feverishly busied herself among stretchers and cots in a base hospital of the Potomac Division of the Northern forces in the Civil War.

Romance came to that nurse of 15. The war ended; she was happy, then sad. But now she is happy again in the memories of the past as she sits and talks at the G. A. R. Home at Hawkins Station.

She is Mrs. Mary Louise Topping, 93, believed to be the only living official government Civil War nurse.

Mrs. Topping only recently came to stay at the home. As she unpacked her "boxes" filled with souvenirs and reminders of other days, including a Civil War service button and government discharge, she pieced together an outline of her life.

During the first months of the war her mother was made chief nurse of the Potomac Division. Mrs. Toppings wistfully tells:

"My mother used to take me with her to run errands for her at the hospitals. I was scarcely out of pinafores, but I could carry stretchers which were laid in rows on the floors of large houses—our only hospitals at the front."

Soon, this little girl became a full fledged nurse. One of her first patients was a young soldier brought into the hospital suffering from typhoid fever. He was Joseph Topping, brigade quartermaster of the 25th Army Corps.

Two years later they were married and six children were born to them, only one of whom is still living. He is Edgar Topping, of Pittsburgh.

Funeral Rites Held For J. C. Tressel

Funeral services were held Saturday for Jacob C. Tressel, 62, a former resident of Homestead, who died Wednesday at his home, 6926 McPherson boulevard, Pittsburgh. He was a member of the Homestead Elks, Eagles and Turners. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Bertha Bell Olumb Tressel.

BRIDGE NEARS COMPLETION

The George Westinghouse Memorial Bridge today shows its outline much as it will appear when it will be opened to the public. A railing is still to be erected along the sides of the span and the paving is still to be laid.

Hundreds of men are working to complete the project, which will be linked with the newly paved Ardmore boulevard by soaring ramps.

The ramps will lift traffic from the Ardmore boulevard outside of East Pittsburgh, carrying it on an even grade to the hilltop at the end of Linden avenue, where it will move across the bridge into East McKeesport.

The complete project will cut several miles from the trip to Greensburg and points beyond on the Lincoln highway, eliminating entirely the dangerous Turtle Creek hill.

R. R. Harris Leaves Estate of $34,000

The estate of Richard R. Harris, valued at $34,000, has been left to his widow, Christina I. Harris, by his will probated last week in the Register's office. The $10,000 estate of William H. Long, Collins avenue, was left to his wife, Alice Long, in his will probated Friday.

WHITAKER PUTS 60 TO WORK

Relief for Whitaker's unemployed taxpayers gained momentum this week with the launching of its improvement program including the construction of a sanitary sewer begun Monday by McCrady-Rodgers Company. All labor is supplied by local residents.

The borough has supplied the materials and tools and the cost of the labor is being borne by the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Association.

The new sewer will be a mile long and will provide seepage on Sherman avenue and Cherry, Hamilton and Whitaker streets.

Sixty men were given jobs on the project, working in two shifts, at $4 a day.

Parking Without Lights Banned In Mifflin

There are no "lovers' lanes" in Mifflin Township. At least there is none recognized by the township police, who have issued orders that "no person or persons will be permitted to park automobiles on main highways or in lanes at night without leaving the lights turned on.

And the police say they are in earnest.

School Board Heads To Be Named Dec. 7

A new president will be elected by the Turtle Creek School Board to replace S. M. Cunningham, who retires this month, when a reorganization meeting is held December 7.

Wilmerding School Board will elect a successor to the post held by President Clarence Dupar, when it meets on this same date.

TWO DISMISSED IN N. BRADDOCK

A policeman and fireman were dismissed from the service at a meeting of the North Braddock Borough Council on Tuesday night. Sergt. John Malley and Driver John Hamm were dismissed after the motion was made by John Stamkosky, chairman of the police committee, and seconded by Joseph Lawler, a member of the committee.

The Council also discussed improvements to streets to aid the unemployed. An 18-inch strip on the outside of the street car tracks between a point a short distance east of Curry street to Dooker's Hollow Bridge should be paved it was decided. The borough needs $25,000 for this project and expects an appropriation from the County Emergency Association.

Auxiliary of V. F. W. To Give Card Party

A card party to aid Father Cox's Relief Fund will be held by the Ladies' Auxiliary to Jene-Mager Post 278, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Bloomfield, tonight in Old St. Patrick's Church.

THE BEGINNING OF A $362,243 PROJECT: WESTINGHOUSE HIGH SCHOOL ANNEX CONSTRUCTION EMPLOYING 200 WORKMEN

'Hits' Resound in Chapel After 'Song Strike'

"No taxation without representation." This was the attitude taken by a group of seniors in the Swissvale High School last week. A decided lack of volume, when songs of the "older generation" were sung during the school's chapel exercises, was attributed to the silence of 50 senior boys.

When questioned their spokesman said:

"If you want our voices, you will have to use our songs. The seniors used to lead the chapel exercises and we feel that we are still entitled to lead them. Furthermore, we object to being seated behind mere juniors. We are seniors and should have the best seats."

A compromise was made and the seniors were permitted to select their own tunes. Now the chapel rings with the most popular hits of the day.

Rampant City Vice Laid To Voters' Attitude

United States Attorney Louis E. Graham believes that this country "will rise or fall as she learns control of her large cities," he told an audience attending the community service Sunday night in the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, Forbes street and Murray avenue.

He explained that one of the principal difficulties in enforcing law is the politically-controlled police departments, saying:

"In practically every large city the police department is politically controlled. The ward chairman controls the selection of the police in the ward. Dope, liquor and vice run on a concession basis.

"The cardinal sin of America is the failure of the people to vote. It is dependent on the elector whether he puts into office a man sympathetic with the law or not.

"Never in the history of the world were men so contemptuous of authority as today."

The Rev. Dr. Jacob S. Payton, pastor of the church, introduced Attorney Graham.

Participating in the services were the Rev. Dr. William M. Woodfin, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. H. H. Forsyth, pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church.

WELFARE FUND DRIVE COMING TO CLOSE

East McKeesport Campaign Ends Saturday; Braddock Barn Dance to Aid Needy

On Saturday, East McKeesport will bring to a close its Welfare Fund drive which was launched with union Thanksgiving services last week in St. John's Lutheran Church.

The welfare drive committee is headed by Joseph Thompson, aided by Silas A. Weaver, secretary; Clarence E. Hassler, treasurer; Elmer Duncan, James Butts, Merle Cross, Joseph S. Hughes, Howard F. Crouthore, Mrs. Earl Pittman and Silas A. Weaver.

The investigation and distribution committee includes Clarence J. Hassler, Thomas Scott, J. P. Smith, James Kelly, Joseph Stewart, Mrs. J. Howard Wilt, Mrs. W. R. Stauffer and Mrs. Frank Harman.

An old-fashioned barn dance will be held December 18 by the Braddock Hose Company No. 2 for the benefit of North Braddock needy. The dance will be held in the hose company building.

Charging that few public utilities have reduced their rates during the present depression when cost of labor and materials has appreciably diminished, a committee has been organized by the Oakmont Chamber of Commerce to promote a joint protest against electric rates by Allegheny Valley civic groups.

Organization work is being carried out by C. D. Carey, chairman of the chamber's committee, Press Anderson and Fred Favo.

Conferences have been planned with Oakmont, Verona and other Valley borough councils. Wilkinsburg Council already has written a letter to the Public Service Commission in Harrisburg, asking for lower electric, gas and water rates.

The Allegheny Valley Association of Oakmont is expected to offer its co-operation to the committee, it has been announced by those active in the organization work.

PARIS—(INS)—Musical mornings are a new concert feature in Paris, inaugurated by the well-known American pianist, Walter Rummel, who believes that good music can best be appreciated in the later hours of the morning, before a heavy lunch. He has opened a series of 10 "Hours of Piano Music" on the Champs Elysees, beginning at 11 o'clock. His first program was devoted to Bach, which the audience liked so much they begged the musician to continue on through the luncheon period.

Monument Erected To Mark Twain Hero

SONORA, Cal.—(INS)—A large monument replica of the markers of the Mark Twain-Bret Harte trail erected in Tuolumne County by the Chamber of Commerce, has been unveiled over the grave of Jacob Richard Stoker in the Masonic Cemetery here. The monument was sponsored by the Welfare Club of Sonora after Mrs. Juliette M. Hood discovered that Dick Stoker, one of Twain's famous characters, lay in an unmarked grave. A number of other societies aided in the drive for funds. Stoker was born in 1820 and died in 1898. He came to California in 1849 and was famous as "Dick Baker" in Twain's novel, "Roughing It," and other novels.

Indian Kills Bison With Bow and Arrow

PAWHUSKA, Okla.—(INS)—Frank Frenchman, an Indian, is an expert archer. When a local organization was putting on a celebration at a town near here, Frenchman volunteered to stage an entirely new sport, that of shooting a buffalo with bow and arrow. He proved his skill and killed the animal, but when the Humane Society in Oklahoma City heard about it they had him arrested on a charge of torturing a buffalo, which is contrary to state laws. Emerging from the courtroom $75 poorer, the Indian decided that he would set no future dates for shooting buffalo, sport or no sport.

Short Story -:- The Good Investment

Roger Morton's legacy did not fall exactly from the heavens into his lap, but it certainly arrived unexpectedly, and at a time when he could make good use of the money. Somewhere in a long line of distant cousins was one with several millions of dollars and a kind heart. When he passed to that celestial sphere, he did not leave seven eights of his accumulated wealth to endow universities, but, instead, he went to considerable trouble to locate and make happy some fifty or more individuals of whom he was only vaguely aware. And Roger found himself the possessor of $35,000.

Roger had lived in Mayville all his life, which was 62 years. He was a short, fat man, with a bald head, except for a curled circle of short gray hair about the ears and just above the neck, a jolly face in which were set the kindest and brownest eyes that ever twinkled with rare, good humor. Roger's eyes were not the sort that you would expect to see in a man who had to scrape and scrimp through many years. They were the eyes of a young man who could laugh his cares away.

A very few close friends, however, could understand Roger's twinkling eyes; to the others he was just "poor old simple Roger." They wondered what he would do with his wealth. It formed the most important topic for conversation in Mayville.

"That's a big sum of money to inherit all of a sudden," said Sam Thorpe, the president of the Mayville Hardware Company, where Roger was employed as bookkeeper. "I suppose that one who has lived as you have lived hasn't much of an idea about handling money. You want to be careful about investments, Roger."

Roger smiled quietly, and his brown eyes twinkled.

"A pile of money is something I never expected to have," he replied in a low voice. "To be made independent, after all these years, is—is—sort of intoxicating. I never saw my benefactor. I rarely ever heard his name mentioned. I cannot understand it yet how he came to leave me all this money. Of course I'll be careful of it, but I know what I've wanted to do these many years.

"Well, anyway, don't even think of making an investment without first talking it over with Mr. Davis, of the Savings Bank," Mr. Thorpe advised. He stared at Roger's shiny, bald head, realizing that the clerk was getting along in years and could make good use of the comfortable sum of money at a time when he most needed it.

"I was thinking of giving up my job," Roger continued in his low voice. "You don't know how I hate indoor work, always have hated it. But I had to do something." He paused for an instant. "I'm going to have a cottage in the country, and a garden thick with flowers, and—and—a few chickens," he added with a smile.

"Not alone!" Mr. Thorpe stared at his clerk. "I'm afraid you'll find that too lonesome, especially for one who seems to enjoy people like you do."

Roger smiled again.

"Oh, I'll be able to get along," he replied.

The tongues of Mayville gossips clattered. The very idea of a man as old as Roger Morton taking a cottage by himself for the purpose of raising flowers and a few chickens. To their way of thinking it would have been the sensible idea to board with a good, respectable family, and live the rest of his days in comfort. And where would he locate? Reason told these purveyors of town news that he would buy in a growing neighborhood, where he could sell easily should he decide to change his mind.

Mr. Thorpe told Mrs. Thorp that Roger in all probability would soon grow tired of living alone and find someone to share the cottage with him. He might even get married. Mrs. Thorp passed this idea on to Mrs. Smith, who lost no time in relaying the possibility to Mrs. Jones. In a remarkably short time the gossips were started off on a new track.

But Mayville gasped when the news leaked out that Roger had purchased the old Seabury cottage on Lake Monitor. That Seabury place had been on the market with no takers since the Lord knows when. No one had dreamed that it ever would be sold. Well, there was never a fool like an old one. With that final decision, none but the most optimistic town resident could see anything but ruin ahead for poor old Roger.

"Look here, Rogers," counseled the kindly disposed Mr. Thorpe. "What's this I hear about you buying that Seabury gold brick?"

Roger smiled, the merry twinkle in his brown eyes telling his former employer nothing. He had made a sudden trip out of town and was satisfied with the result of an investigation.

"I'm going to rebuild the old cottage," he replied.

"But the section has gone down!" Mr. Thorpe insisted. "Valuations have depreciated terribly!"

Roger just smiled.

The old Seabury cottage was pulled down until only the framework was left, and upon the skeleton arose Roger's new structure. Part of the old material went into the new building.

Roger watched with the greatest interest the carpenters at work. Then came the painters. With the exception of a few days, when Roger made three additional trips out of town, he was busily engaged with the making of a new garden, setting out shrubs and plants. Mayville wondered how the former clerk knew so much about beautifying grounds; how he had managed to become so artistic in such a short time. But they had to admit that he accomplished wonders with what he started out to do.

Roger moved into his cottage one delightful April day. He had purchased some substantial and useful furniture, and here and there once more his good judgment was apparent. Just as if he had been doing it for years in rugs and curtains, instead of in columns of figures, the rooms were furnished in excellent taste.

"And now that you are here, who is to share it with you?" Mr. Thorpe asked. He had called to inspect Roger's new home, and was very favorably impressed with what he had already seen.

"Oh, I've arranged for that," he said mysteriously.

"Well, that's a help," replied Mr. Thorpe. "You won't have much fun living in this locality."

Roger's home did look queer in the desolate quietness of Lake Monitor. It was the one bright spot on the shore and the nearest neighbor was located more than a mile away. Several abandoned cottages—relics of a once popular summer place—were scattered along the lake in various stages of delapidation, a once glorious spot gone to ruin in a few years.

But toward the end of April the residents of Mayville noticed that a sudden activity had come over the Lake Monitor district. Cottages were being renovated, many workmen were busily engaged making repairs and painting the drab looking structures. New faces appeared on the town streets and in the various places of business where goods were bought and consigned to the lake cottages. This could not be fully understood at first, but soon the people began to discover that Roger had revived the former popularity of the lake region by making the old Seabury place look attractive. They were later to find out that Roger had quietly bought up several pieces of real estate at a very low figure.

In June Roger brought to his home the one who was to share it with him. She was a delicate, little lady, of about 50 years of age, with a pair of blue eyes as a contrast to Roger's brown ones. In a white muslin dress, she was first discovered by one of the gossips of Mayville, and in a short time everybody in town knew what had happened.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton had plenty of callers that evening, and they were all well received. For the lady of the house was gracious, and as for Roger—well, he always did enjoy company.

Every Little Girl Will Be Interested in What the

SUN-TELEGRAPH

Doll Lady

Has to Say Today

Here Is Her Daily Pre-Christmas Letter:—

Dear Little Girls:—

Here we are, right into December and well on our way to Christmas. The time is going to be altogether too short to do everything I want to do before the holidays. I can see where I am going to be right up to my eyebrows in work. But this kind of work—spreading sunshine—is so satisfactory that I don't mind it. The joy I give to the little girls who do the little things I ask them to do to get one of my adorable "Honeybunch" dolls well repays for the days and nights I have to employ before the holiday season closes.

Meet My "Honeybunch"—the DOLL Of All Dolls—

Several scores of little girls have already secured their big, lovable "Honeybunches" and they are already assured of a happy Christmas. I don't think that there is anything in the world that will give a little girl greater happiness than a big, lovely doll—no matter what time of the year. Of course, I believe that my "Honeybunch" will contribute more real joy than any other doll.

I am mighty glad that I have a big supply of "Honeybunches" this year, but for fear that the supply will run out, the doll makers are still working day and night for me. As fast as I take them out of the big doll house, they put new dollies in their place.

Every little girl who has received a "Honeybunch" has been made happy beyond description. "Honeybunch," you know, is different than any other doll and she is not on sale in any of the stores. In the first place, she is nearly as tall as this newspaper is long, has a sparkling smile, twinkling eyes that open and close, a charming voice that reaches your heart, beautiful organdy clothes in dainty colors with lace cap to match, rubber hands and arms that are unbreakable, rubber panties, a pacifier and she really does a lot of cute thing that real live babies can do.

Hundreds of little girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity have already found that she is really easy to get. Any little girl who wants one all for her very own can have a "Honeybunch" by doing the simple, easy things I ask her to do. Now if you want one, send me your name and address on the Doll Lady coupon in this announcement and I will send you a letter telling you just what you must do to get this big, glorious dolly before Christmas. And I'll also send you a dandy picture of "Honeybunch" in colors.

Here are the names of some of the little girls who have written to me: Virginia Grilletto, Ruth White, Pearline Davis, Mary Cronin, Lillian Hopkins, Helen Stewart, Betty Jane Martin, Hope Griffiths, Betty Lowe, Carolyn Baldinger, Therma Popp, Mildred Terry and Josephine Florian.

COUNTY CAGERS TO ORGANIZE

East End basketball fans will be interested in the calling of the Tri-County League meeting by President Lebowitz in the sporting department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph next Sunday afternoon.

Billy Mitchell, manager of the Swissvale entry in the loop, is active in the tricounty operations again this season. Monessen won the loop last season, following a battle with Duquesne. Swissvale and Monongahela.

Just what the Duquesne Republicans will do this season should be revealed at the meeting this week. Manager Mike Ballough has not disclosed his hand and there is a possibility that Duquesne will be back.

Duquesne possibly is the hottest town in the tri-state district in the matter of basketball and Duquesne fans were disappointed when the Monessen quintet nosed them out.

The league is late getting under way because President Lebowitz was in the hospital for a couple of weeks. Wellsburg will be back in the loop, and there are rumors that Wilkinsburg and Braddock, together with a Homestead five, will join.

Floyd France, of Monongahela who looked after the interests of the up-river club last season, will be at the meeting, and it is stated that the Monessen Merchants are desirous of getting into the loop.

Whether the East End teams want another Monessen outfit in the circuit is a matter of doubt, but this will be fought out when Prexy Lebowitz calls the session to order.

GELTICS MEET SWITCH TEAM

By TOM BIRKS

With the return to the soccer fold of the Pittsburgh Celtics, East End soccer fans are breathing more easily these days. For a time it seemed as if the famous Lawrenceville soccer outfit was going to pass out of the picture, at least for this season. But Tom Robinson again came to the rescue and the Green and White came back.

Last Saturday the club played its first game under the managerial wing of Harold Farmer and defeated the National Tube eleven with ease. Next Saturday afternoon, however, East End fans will see the Celtics get their greatest test of the season when the league-leading Union Switch aggregation is met at Swissvale.

The Red and White, under Jack Compbell, has been breezing through a tough league schedule and unless they are stopped the Switch team is going to nail its first pennant to the mast.

Leslie Park fans will take a look at the Pittsburgh Rovers hooking up with the German Sport Club. The Germans were notified of the suspension of Krampf, fullback by the National Amateur Cup Committee yesterday, so the Germans' backfield will have to be reorganized.

Since Krampf was ordered off the field at Shannon for his run-in with Zeewan, he has played three games, which could have brought him a season suspension.

Locks Up Daughter Going to Dances

ROME.—An effective, though somewhat old-fashioned cure for dancing daughters was recently resorted to by Hannibal Ghelfi, a worried father living in the village of Stradella. Hannibal's daughter Pasqualina was very much of a social butterfly up to six months ago, when she suddenly disappeared from local society circles.

Investigation revealed that Hannibal had decided to punish his daughter for frequenting the local dance hall by stripping her of her clothes, locking her in an attic and feeding her on bread and water for good measure.

EXCHANGE BANK MOVES TO AID DEPOSITORS

Machinery Set Up for Proving Claims; Gordon Calls Conference Here

Machinery for taking proof of depositors' credits in the closed Exchange National Bank has been set up, it was learned today. The process involves depositors' establishing the amounts owed them by the closed institution, following which the receiver issues a certificate of deposit.

First dividend is payable, under ordinary procedure, at any time 90 days or more after filing of the receiver's account with the Controller of the Currency, in Washington. The account generally is made after certificates of deposit have been issued.

CALLS MEETING

While the First National Bank continued paying 50 per cent dividends to depositors in the closed Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., today, Dr. William D. Gordon, secretary of banking, called the first directors' meeting of his Second District Realization Corporation to consider liquidation of assets in closed state banks.

The meeting of the corporation's board has been set for 11 a. m. Tuesday, in the offices of the Colonial Trust Company, whose president, James C. Chaplin, has been acting as adviser to Gordon in formulating plans for relief of distressed depositors in closed state banks in this district.

PLAN DIVIDENDS

Announcement of initial dividends in several banks in this district, payable through Gordon's especially appointed private banker, Robert L. McCune, is expected to be made during Gordon's visit here.

Only about half of depositors eligible to receive their first 50 per cent dividends from the Bank of Pittsburgh presented their claims yesterday. Six hundred and fifty additional depositors were eligible to draw funds of more than $650,000 today.

About 80 per cent of those who presented their claims yesterday opened accounts with the First National Bank, whose purchase of half the assets of the Bank of Pittsburgh made the dividend possible.

Corporation Chartered To Liquidate Banks

HARRISBURG, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Issuance of a charter by the State Department for the First District Realization Corporation, comprising the greater Philadelphia area, to expedite the liquidation of closed state banks was announced today by Secretary of Banking William D. Gordon.

Dr. Gordon also announced the appointment of Judge Harry S. McDevitt, of the Philadelphia Common Pleas Court, as representative of the depositors in closed banks in that area.

The banking head said he had found it impracticable to select a person from among depositors because of different factions involved in each bank and the number of banks involved.

Closed Bank to Pay Christmas Dividend

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 3.—Harry G. Wilson, receiver of the Farmers National Bank of Hickory, which closed its doors last May, has announced that a 25 per cent dividend, the first to be paid, would be available to depositors before Christmas. Wilson said checks will be mailed to 845 persons and will total $108,220.91.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

ABOARD S. S. EMPRESS OF RUSSIA, Dec. 3.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Look on your map and find Kamchatka—it's part of Siberia. Well, we was just grazing it all day yesterday. There ought to be a law against making an ocean this wide. That's something Congress can take up at the next session, as they won't have anything else to settle much outside of unemployment, two billion deficit, arrange extra taxes, where they will do least harm next November, relieve Wall street and think up something new to promise the farmers. Narrowing an ocean will be just a chore for this Congress.

DR. WILLIAM L. M'EWAN

M'EWAN TO QUIT PULPIT SUNDAY

When the Rev. Dr. William L. McEwan steps down from the pulpit of the Third Presbyterian Church, Sunday, after partaking of communion with his congregation, he will retire to become pastor emeritus after 38 years of service.

Dr. McEwan, who came to Pittsburgh eight years after he had been ordained into the Presbyterian ministry, will not preach a farewell sermon. The retiring minister, oldest in point of service in the presbytery of Pittsburgh, will be succeeded by the Rev. Louis H. Evans, of Pomona, Cal. He will be installed December 16.

Coincidental with his retirement, Dr. McEwan announced he planned to preach, late in December, at the installation services of his nephew, the Rev. Dr. John W. Christie, as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Wilmington, Del. Dr. McEwan's first charge following his graduation from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1885, Dr. McEwan's only other charge was in Webster Grove, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis.

TWO BROTHERS LINKED IN RUM CONSPIRACY

Milwaukee Police Also in Hunt for Pair for Death Of Kin; Identified Here

Two gunmen sought in the killing of Morris Curran, bootleg supply dealer, in Perrysville avenue, June 24, are wanted in Milwaukee and in Italy, Sergt. Samuel Wheeler, of the homicide squad, disclosed today.

The two are Angelo LaMantia, and his brother, Anthony, both positively identified from bertillon photographs, Wheeler says, as having been seen in front of Curran's new home where he was shot down. Two of the witnesses are women, one a school teacher and the other a high school student, Wheeler asserted.

Immigration authorities informed Wheeler that the brothers are wanted by the Italian authorities on murder charges. Milwaukee police sent a letter stating that Angelo is wanted for the killing of his brother-in-law, Frank Aiello, May 23, that the brothers are liquor runners with Chicago gang connections and have lived at Youngstown, O., under various aliases.

CITY GUARDIANS DONATE WEEK

More than 2,400 police and firemen have agreed to work a week without pay to aid Mayor Charles H. Kline's fight to limit 1931 city expenditures, Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh announced today.

A request that patrolmen and firemen take this action was read in every station yesterday, Walsh said, and was unanimously adopted. Previously, the inspectors, fire chiefs and other officers of both departments had agreed to the proposal.

All seven days must be "donated" during December.

They will constitute the second week which firemen and police have been without pay. The first, several weeks ago, the men were given vacations without pay instead of "donating" their services to the city as in the present case.

Magee Sees Danger Of Financial Crisis in City Extravagance

The end of the spendthrift policy in city government must come at once in Pittsburgh if this city is to escape the fate of Chicago, Fall River, Mass., and other cities which have lost their civic liberty through careers of extravagance, former Mayor William A. Magee told the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants last night at the Keystone Athletic Club.

At the same time Magee warned against "wild and panicky" efforts of city officias to cut the budget without sufficient study. He condemned civic organizations and special groups who have brought about the spending through their ceaseless clamor for consideration.

The city budget as it now stands represents no reduction from last year's millage, Magee declared. Revenues for 1932 have been estimated $500,000 too high at $18,500,000, he believes. A reduction of 3 mills would require an additional budget slash of $2,000,000 he asserted.

He said:

"If the depression continues for a couple years more, many taxpayers in Pittsburgh and other cities will lose their ability to pay their current taxes with the result that the levy upon those who can pay will constantly mount and as it becomes higher, the number of delinquents will grow."

REVENUE QUESTION

City Council is not facing the facts in making its estimates of revenue, Magee said. The City Treasurer this year will collect only approximately $18,450,000 on a basis of 25½ mills land tax levy whereas it has been estimated for Council that the city will collect $18,500,000, or $50,000 more in 1932, on a 25 mill tax.

A closer estimate for next year would be $18,000,000, Magee declared. He said:

"The purpose of over-estimates of revenue is to postpone painful reductions of expenditures in the hope that fate will intervene. City officers included two items in their revenue for 1931 which are not revenues at all, the bank depository fund of $500,000 and the refund from the garbage company of nearly $400,000."

Had it not been for this arrangement an actual deficit of $1,500,000 would have occurred this year, Magee said. This was further avoided by the shutting off of the purchase of large amounts of supplies and the furloughing of the entire city payroll.

The largest part of the blame for the tremendous increase in city debts must be placed, Magee believes, on the numerous civic organizations and groups who have constantly demanded increased municipal services. He qualified that, however, to some extent, declaring:

"So far as these things are done extravagantly and wastefully or to provide employment for the supporters of the political machine, the responsibility is with city officials, but so far as the expenditure is unavoidable due to a policy decided by unanimous support of civic organizations, city officers should not be wholly blamed."

Only a few public servants, Magee said, have given the necessary study to public problems and possessed the requisite courage to resist group and sectional clamor in the interest of the higher advantage of the community at large.

ANNEXATION SCORED

Pittsburgh's policy of annexation has been ruinous to its finances, Magee declared. He cited the fact that one of the new Pittsburgh wards has less than $3,000,000 in taxable values, yielding not more than $40,000 in revenues, and the city's expenditure for a fire engine house in the

PEN AT ATLANTA QUARANTINED

Because of the discovery of spinal meningitis in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., government officials in Pittsburgh today were ordered not to send any more prisoners to Atlanta until further notice.

U. S. Marshal J. C. McGregor received the notice in a telegram from Sanford Bates, director of federal prisons.

Several prisoners are in the county jail here under sentence to Atlanta, but it is understood they will be sent to federal prison camps or the penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

A similar notice was sent to other districts. In Charleston, W. Va., 57 prisoners were to be sent elsewhere.

Court Grants Rule On Attorney Walsh

A rule, returnable December 19, was granted today in United States District Court on Attorney Winfield S. Walsh to show cause why he should not be barred from further practice in Federal Court. Walsh, a special assistant federal attorney for four months in 1927, was sentenced to four years in jail for embezzlement in September, 1930. This was another step in disbarment proceedings brought by the Allegheny County Bar Association.

Thief Takes Doe From Auto as Hunter Eats

If anyone with a suspicious look tries to sell you a 160-pound doe today, ask him where he got it. Maybe it's the one stolen from the running board of the automobile of Lloyd Tassmore, rear of 5337 Second avenue, early today. He'd like to have it back.

Tassmore, with half a dozen other hunters, prowled about the mountains in Clearfield County a good part of yesterday looking for deer, and succeeding in bagging three. Tassmore tied his to the running board of his car and came back to Pittsburgh. He stopped in front of a restaurant near his home this morning and went inside. When he returned the doe was gone.

CHIEF DIRECTED TO PROVIDE ALL FIGURES

Monaghan Vague on Cars Serviced; Transfer to Safety Department Urged

The workings of the municipal garage and repair shop, which remained more or less of a mystery even to the expert accountants who investigated the City Department of Supplies, are about to be dragged into the light by the Budget Committee of City Council.

W. H. Monaghan, superintendent, appeared before Council today to defend estimates he made on appropriations for his department, which is under the direct supervision of Mayor Charles H. Kline. On questioning by Chairman W. Y. English, Monaghan was unable to say exactly how many automobiles are serviced at the city garage. He was told to come back tomorrow with all the figures.

Councilman English said:

"This service is costing the city entirely too much. We want to know who is using the gasoline and where."

Asked his opinion on the proposed change of the city garage from the Mayor's office to the Department of Public Safety, Monaghan said he thought it should stay under the Mayor's office. He said:

"That way I am personally responsible for the supplies. If I were to give out tires every time some people think I ought, the appropriation would run out in July."

$6,000 SLASHED FROM BUDGET

Estimated city revenues for 1932 will approximate $26,935,000, slightly under that of the current year, tables accompanying the new budget showed today.

Of this amount, $18,485,000 is in collectable taxes, while the remainder of $8,450,000 is expected to be derived from miscellaneous sources. Council is basing the approximate taxes for next year on the amount collected for 1931, Chairman W. Y. English, of the Budget Committee, declared. The 1932 approximate was not listed in the supplement.

Miscellaneous revenues for 1931 totaled $8,987,500, according to figures in the Treasurer's office.

Continuing its budget paring from the Mayor's original estimates, Council sliced departmental and bureau requests late yesterday $36,000 from the amount originally asked.

Of the slashes made, and construed as a blow against future rug-purchasing proclivities, was a cut from $5,000 to $1,000 in the mayoralty contingent fund.

Kline's equipment fund was cut from $1,000 to $500. Typewriters and other office supplies are bought from this appropriation.

Councilman Charles W. Anderson said:

"Let them use some of the old machines. And, incidentally, we don't need any more rugs in the Mayor's office."

On motion of Chairman English, Council was requested to invite Councilmen-elect William J. Soost and P. J. McArdle to sit in on the budget sessions and "give their co-operation in getting us out of this tangle."

Detectives said they were filling capsules with morphine when they entered the house.

BASSETT BOND DEAL CLUES STUDIED

Creditors Investigating Reported Shipments of Securities to South

Investigators for the creditors of Ira S. Bassett, business man-evangelist, today were sifting what they said were well-founded clues that Bassett had transferred huge holdings, probably in bonds, to Memphis, Tenn., shortly before his death.

The creditors, represented by Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, have claims approximating $1,500,000.

Attorney Howard D. Montgomery, of counsel for the widow, whose daughter, Mrs. Genevieve B. Marks, is protesting the probating of her father's will, on the ground he revoked it, admitted today there was a possibility of securities having been shipped.

Attorney Eaton said it is reported Bassett made the shipments to a friend, but it is not known just how the amounts involved were handled.

60 RINGS FOUND ON MAN SOUGHT BY PAWNSHOPS

Police Say Suspect Can Make Yellow Stones Look Like Finest of Gems

On the person of a man arrested at Fourth avenue and Grant street today city detectives reported they found 60 "diamond" rings, 120 pawn tickets and $435.

The man was registered as Aaron Naftal, 50, much admired and sought by pawnbrokers throughout the country who contend he can make a canary yellow diamond look like the real thing, thus borrow real money. He is said to paint the stones a blue white.

Detectives said Naftal worked a racket on 10 Pittsburgh pawnbrokers seven months ago. Known to most pawnbrokers, he is reputed to pay strangers $10 to make a loan for him on one ring and then, as an anti-climax, sell the stranger another.

Arrested with Naftal was Benjamin Miller, both of Brooklyn, N. Y., and released for $105 each for hearing tomorrow.

COUNCIL BANS CONVENTION JOURNEYS

Members Agree to Refuse Officials Expenses in '32; Grant Lang, Reppert Trip

Journeys of city officials to conventions in 1932 will be prohibited, City Council decided yesterday when it was agreed to honor no expense accounts for this purpose after January 1.

Council so moved after Public Works Director Edward G. Lang and Chief Engineer Charles M. Reppert, of the Works Department, requested permission and expenses to attend President Hoover's engineering conference in Washington this month.

After much discussion both were permitted to make the journey, but Councilman Harry A. Little said:

"This is the season for conventions. Everybody wants to go. Everybody is invited and as many try to go as possible. I suggest that the practice be stopped next year."

Councilman W. Y. English put the request into action.

We have been Warned and Threatened for the last month or so that, IF WE DID NOT ADVANCE THE PRICE of the fresh milk we sell that we would suffer as a consequence. The first move in this direction is the meeting of our price and requiring no bottle deposit.

For four years we have been selling fresh milk at 2 cents under the home delivered price. This is fair. Our customers are entitled to this difference. The NO DEPOSIT on the bottle puts the selling price of milk below cost on every bottle sold for which an empty bottle is not received in exchange therefor. This is the FIRST MOVE to penalize us for not agreeing to Raise Prices.

We have maintained this difference, before mentioned, for four years and as a consequence have SAVED OUR PATRONS OVER HALF A MILLION DOLLARS; and, the farmers supplying this milk received more money for their product than they could have gotten from other dealers. This by reason of the costly service rendered by others as against our method of distribution.

Remember···the reason for this "no deposit for bottle" is because

We Would Not Advance Our Price

In order that we can continue to fight this battle for fair prices for you, we again ask that you please bring an empty bottle when securing a fresh supply. Thank you,

P. H. BUTLER CO.

GAIN REPORTED IN ELECTRICAL APPLIANCES

Sales Here Gain in 1931, Speaker Tells Rotary Club, Giving Research Results

More large electric appliances were sold in Pittsburgh during the past year than in the preceding one, members of the Rotary Club of Pittsburgh were told yesterday at their weekly luncheon in the Fort Pitt Hotel in analysis of the city's economic condition.

The facts and figures, which showed 45 per cent of the residents own their homes, were based on a four-month research study conducted here by the R. L. Polk & Co. George M. Rowland, Jr., of the Sun-Telegraph, was the speaker. The survey results were purchased by the newspaper for free merchandising information to local merchants.

It was cited that only 9.98 per cent of the families were without income, pay or wages and that Pittsburgh families carry larger insurance policies and that the proportion of the insured is larger here than in any other metropolitan center.

The market study, the first of its kind ever attempted, marks the beginning of a nationwide study in which every city of 25,000 population will be analyzed on a basis of consumers' habits. In Pittsburgh, a crew of 200 trained men worked day and night for four months to collect the data. It is estimated that more than 2,000,000 facts, descriptive of the market, have already been compiled.

The complete review of these facts is available through the courtesy of the Sun-Telegraph, and further information may be had by telephoning Grant 6500.

Maccabeans to Hold Chanukah Ritual

The Maccabean Zion Camp will hold its annual celebration of Chanukah Tuesday night, the night of the fifth Chanukah candle. The celebration will be held in the auditorium of the Young Men and Women's Hebrew Association with Rabbi A. M. Ashinsky as the principal speaker.

Rabbi Ashinsky will speak on the significance of the lighting of the traditional eight candles, and Dr. H. M. Snitzer will talk on the spirit of the Maccabeans before the restoration of Palestine. The traditional ceremony of lighting the candles and the serving of "Latkes" will take place in addition to the holiday program.

Two Youths Admit Aiding In Thefts

Woods Run police today held two young men who, they said, admitted they aided two others in a series of robberies in that district late in September. Early in October police arrested two men for their part in the robberies. They are now serving sentences in the workhouse.

The men arrested early today by Capt. Anthony Block and Lieut. Robert McIntosh gave their names as Frank Andiezak, 20, of 812 Beaver avenue, and Andrew Williams, 18, of 1025 Manhattan street.

Grid Deaths Not Alarming, Dean Asserts

DR. CHRISTIAN GAUSS

Princeton Official Here for Lecture Tonight

Football fatalities this season, which mounted to 33 today with the death of a Munhall youth, while high, are not alarming in the opinion of Dr. Christian Gauss, dean of the college of Princeton University.

Dr. Gauss is here to speak tonight in the Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. lecture course on the topic, "Who Should Go To College?"

Asked for his view on deaths due to football, he said:

"The situation is not to be regarded as alarming in view of the greater number of college and high school boys playing the game today. Football in recent years has grown by leaps and bounds.

"The change in the rules to open style play, rather than mass formations, has aided in keeping down fatalities but has probably increased the number of leg, ankle and knee injuries. The boys playing today are not as rugged fro, the feet up as they were 25 years ago for the reason they are not walking as much but riding in automobiles.

"Teams which are well equipped and rigidly trained have few fatalities. No one should play football unless he is throughly fit."

BLOOD OFFERED TO SAVE BOY

An appeal over the police radio for blood donors today may save the life of 16-year-old Robert McDonald, critically ill of pneumonia in South Side Hospital.

Among the four first to offer their blood was McDonald's 14-year-old brother, Harry, a pupil in St. Martin's School. Patrolman John Mathias was another.

The boy has been in the hospital 10 weeks. He fractured an arm in falling down an embankment near his home in Herndon street, Elliott. Pneumonia developed and today his condition became serious.

Physicians took samples of the blood offered.

Philadelphia Plans Movie Ticket Tax

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Motion picture fans in Philadelphia will have to pay an extra two cents on all movie tickets after January 1, under a bill introduced into City Council.

The bill is designed to take the place of the present assessment of $100 license tax levied against all Philadelphia theaters. It is estimated the new act will yield an annual revenue to the city of $1,500,000 instead of the $13,500 now collected.

MAN CRUSHED BY MILK TRUCK

Edward Boyle, 22, of Morris, Pa., mechanic on a milk delivery truck, suffered a fractured leg and body bruises when the truck ran against an embankment on Federal street, near Jefferson street, and upset early today. He was taken to Allegheny General Hospital where it was said his injuries were not serious.

Dean White, 28, of West Homestead, driver of the truck, told police that the steering gear broke. The truck ran across the street and crashed into the embankment. Boyle was thrown from his seat and pinned between the truck and the embankment. Police questioned White but did not hold him.

Mayor-Elect Pleads Johnstown Rate Case

Eddie McCloskey, Mayor-elect of Johnstown, was in Pittsburgh yesterday to appear before Commissioner Samuel Walker of the Public Service Commission at a hearing here in behalf of Johnstown residents seeking refunds on telephone charges made by the Johnstown Telephone Company.

McCloskey said increased rates were in effect from May 1927 to July 1929 and were disapproved by the Commission. The Johnstown company recently was taken over by the Pennsylvania Telephone Company.

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

This afternoon brings another debut to star the season, that of Lois Tack, daughter of the Harry Sweetser Tacks, of Sewickley. She's making her bow at a tea in her home.

Lois is wearing an exceptionally attractive gown of frosted peach-glo velvet fashioned with a square neckline and long sleeves having inserts of lace at the elbow cascading to the wrist. She's carrying Talisman roses. Her mother has chosen burgundy velvet for her costume. Fall decorations are being used throughout the home, with a profusion of chrysanthemums. Miss Tack is having no aides and her classmates include the debs of the season.

Down in Sewickley Heights the younger set, weary of a season of eveningless parties, will have a Dutch treat kid party, cum dance tonight in the Allegheny Country Club. Katharine Croft and Margaret Holdship are sponsoring the affair.

* * *

In honor of Nicola Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra, the Musicians Club of Pittsburgh will entertain tomorrow evening in the Hotel Schenley, following the Cleveland Orchestra concert in Syria Mosque.

Among those who have boxes for the concert are Mrs. W. and Thaw, Jr., president of the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association; Mrs. Daniel M. Clemson, Mrs. William Reed Thompson, Mrs. H. H. Mc-Clintic, Mrs. Horace Forbes Bassett, Mrs. Mortimer Miller, Mrs. J. Gerald Firth, Mrs. Leon Falk, Jr., Mrs. W. J. Holland, Mrs. William Watson Smith, Mrs. Nathaniel Spear, Mrs. John W. Lawrence, Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson, Mrs. James L. Stuart and Mrs. Ralph Flinn.

The debutantes are always in demand at social affairs benefits and socially-sponsored theatrical performances.

Buds to Usher

So one is not a bit surprised to hear that a group of buds will usher at the Stage and Play Society's opening performance Tuesday night in the Twentieth Century Club.

Lucretia Bishop heads the usher list, with Rita Bamberger, Katharine Frazer, Dale Hood, Virginia Doyle, Betty Kennedy, Elinor Bean, Caroline Mitchell and Gretchen Bickford.

Have you heard how a group of the social set is raising money for the Welfare Fund? The girls are taking subscriptions for Harper's Bazaar. These zealous workers include Peggy Berger, Helen Murdoch, Janet McKinney, Betty Curtin, Mary Phillips, Virginia Hart, Betty McCance, Louise Bausman, Mrs. William Weaver, Mary Ritchey, Dorothy Keller and Mrs. Stuart Cleine.

STYLIST SHOWS ATTRACTIVE PURSE AND GLOVE ENSEMBLE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Since the purse and glove go hand in hand it is only right that they should form a partnership and go in search of smartness together. And so we find that designers this season have concentrated on some most attractive sets for both day and evening wear. And even when not matched both glove and purse are exceptionally attractive this season, with a view perhaps to tempting us to expenditures that we might otherwise forego.

* * *

BUT WE GO FORTH, clad bravely, feeling that not only are we cheering ourselves and the world by putting on a bright front and looking our best, but that we are also helping the wheels of industry to turn. And so, never before was shopping fraught with so many possibilities or interest. But to pick up our bag and gloves again. Antelope is one of the most popular leathers this season and is being extensively used for both day and evening accessories, some of the best evening shoes being of soft antelope in delicate pastel shades. Beige is one of the best colors for evening gloves, since it blends with most hues. And now for some of the latest ideas in this direction from Paris.

* * *

FIRST COMES a smart set from Alexandrine, consisting of gloves and muff-purse, made in chamois colored or natural antelope of light weight. Edges are pinked and there is punched work holes inside pinked scallops. Muff has purse inside beneath ruffle, closing with a zipper. There are small bow-knots on gloves and muff, the latter being quite small—only about nine inches in length.

Duke Sails for U. S. On Divorce Quest

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(AP)—The Duke of Manchester, married in 1900 to Helena Zimmerman, daughter of a Cincinnati banker, sailed yesterday for New York on the way to Cuba, where he will seek a divorce.

It is an open secret, however, for divorces granted in Cuba are not recognized in England and if the duke should remarry after a Cuban divorce he might face criminal proceedings which would bring him to trial on a charge of bigamy.

The opening round of the pair event, scheduled as an afternoon session, lasted until 9 o'clock last night. The night session for team competition therefore was limited to a few rounds and no scores were computed.

Tribal Rites, Mass Observed by Indians

SAN XAVIER DEL BAC, Ariz., Dec. 3.—(AP)—The age-old pagan ceremony of the Papago Indian mingled today with the ritual of the faith to which he was converted by the first white men who came to the Southwest.

The annual fiesta of the Papago started at sundown last night with tribal chants and dances. But today the redman digressed from his primitive observance to hear a solemn pontifical high mass sung by Bishop Daniel J. Gercke of the diocese of Tucson.

Culbertson vs. Lenz

Ely Culbertson

Sidney Lenz
The greatest contract bridge battle ever staged!
Beginning December 7, these two outstanding authorities will play 150 rubbers to test the respective merits of their bidding systems. Culbertson will uphold his own "Approach-Forcing" system, whereas Lenz will play the "One-Two-Three" variation of the "official" system.
Culbertson has posted $5,000 against Lenz' $1,000 that he will win. The loser will pay the sum involved to charity.
Bridge players throughout the country will follow this unusual contest with the keenest interest, and the Post-Gazette has arranged the most outstanding coverage for the benefit of Pittsburghers. Both the principals—Culbertson and Lenz—will write their own personal account of each evening's play for this newspaper. These will afford not only the best and only authoritative account of the tournament, but will give the fine points of both bidding and play as well. The service will be exclusive with the Post-Gazette in Pittsburgh.

ward will consume three-fourths of that amount. The developed wards are made to bear the burden of the newly annexed sections, which do not begin to pay their own way, according to Magee. He said:

"We are the victims of a wrong idea in wanting a tremendous community population. It is the greatest false doctrine we have to cope with, and would account for more of the city's expense in the last five years than any other single item."

Blaming independents and reformers for destroying what he termed "a very good public vehicle" in Pittsburgh district political parties, he said:

"There is no one in our political system with a spontaneous "No" to any proposal. Our administration is a one-sided one, and our public officers are "Yes" men. If we had another party here and it had newspaper support, everything would be thoroughly discussed as to merits and expense. It works well in the United States government."

CRISIS LAID TO PUBLIC

Citing that public officials are backed by the public and are subject to political suicide in defying the demands of the people even in the face of tremendous expense, Magee termed the economic crisis the result of the "sins of the people." He assailed the public for silence and non-participation in matters concerning its own welfare, declaring:

"The public is silent until it is in the midst of depression. It doesn't pay any attention to waste and extravagance until then. Questions of policy, initiated by the community itself, are directly responsible for our economic condition."

A hasty policy in considering the budget is condemned by Magee. He declared it should have been prepared two months ago and calmly and deliberately reviewed rather than attacked in a spirit which may result in the same sort of public harm seen in Chicago and Fall River.

The Pennsylvania member was nominated for Congress by both the Republicans and Democrats and both invited him to enter their organization. He has chosen the Democrats.

Because of his unique position Boland will be accorded special honors.

Philadelphia Taxes May Force Out Mills

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Philadelphia, faced with an almost inevitable increase in the 1932 tax rate, has been warned that higher taxes will mean an exodus of many textile mills to other sections of the country.

Julius R. Bux, president of the Philadelphia Textile Manufacturers' Association, issued a statement yesterday that a higher tax rate would influence many of the city's mills to relocate where more favorable conditions prevail. He added they could never be induced to return because of the prohibitive cost of such moving.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
LAST NIGHT'S RESULT

Chicago	2—Canadiens 1

By CARL W. SHATTO

Victories in their next two games—with the Windsor Bulldogs at Duquesne Garden tonight, and with the Buffalo Bisons at Fort Erie, Ontario, on Saturday—will put the Yellow Jackets in first place in the International League hockey race.

This announcement may not occasion any surprise among local fans who have kept close tab on the league standings, but when Coach Charley Reid made the statement to his skaters today it came as something of a shock for the local puckmen have been so busy trying to capture and hold on to second place they were not aware that they were within easy striking distance of the top.

JACKETS NEAR LEAD

A win and two ties enabled the Reidmen to ease into the runner-up berth last week. They defended their position, and advanced to within four points of Buffalo's pacesetters by downing London on Tuesday. A victory over Windsor tonight will boost the locals to within two points of the idle Bisons, and a triumph over these same Bisons on Saturday will leave the two clubs deadlocked for the lead.

That the Jackets will down both Windsor and Buffalo is not a probability, but it is a possibility, for the local defense has permitted fewer enemy tallies than that of any other club in the circuit, and the only Pittsburgh defeat was sustained in an overtime battle with Buffalo, in a fog so dense that effective play was almost impossible.

In attempting to throw the locals out of their victory stride tonight the Bulldogs, league champions, are likely to find that Pittsburgh's fine defensive record is not an accident. Fraser and Berlett compare well with any defense duo in the league, and the goalie to whom Cox need doff his hat must be a miracle worker. London was not able to pierce the Jacket defense for a single goal in two games, and the champions, who have been finding the going somewhat rough in the new race, don't figure to indulge in any scoring orgy.

MILLER MAKES DEBUT

As he watches his Rodden-Ingram-Arbour front line combination show class with each passing game, Coach Reid has no qualms regarding the starting lineup section of his attack, but he is not at all certain as to how his first relief line will function. Lou Holmes has been recalled by Chicago, and Earl Miller, 168-pound warrior sent here to replace him, will be sent in at pivot to make plays for Halliday and Gregg.

The Bulldogs have a new goalie in one Mr. Kerr, who has replaced the veteran Clint Benedict, and a very prolific scorer in D. Roche, right wing who recently won a game single-handed by scoring three unassisted goals against Cleveland. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		Windsor
Cox	G	Kerr
Fraser	R D	Bellemer
Berlett	L D	Arbour
Gaetjen	C	Haynes
D. Arbour	R W	F. Roche
Ingram	L W	Jr. Roche

Substitutions—Pittsburgh, Halliday, Gregg, Prentice, Miller, Slatte, Fields, White and Burch. Windsor, Brown, Phillips, Lever, Holmes, Hemsberger and Pravisbok.

WINDSOR 3-0 VICTOR

WINDSOR, Ontario, Dec. 3.—(AP)—After being held scoreless for two periods of their International Hockey League game last night, Windsor came through with a third-period rush to defeat London, 3 to 0. The lineup:

Windsor		London
Kerr	G	Stuart
Bellemer	R D	Holway
Arbour	L D	Hicks
Haynes	C	Carrigan
F. Roche	R W	Quenneville
Jr. Roche	L W	Reinikka

Substitutions—Windsor, Huggins, Hillsberger and Brown. London, Neville, Hoard, Grosh, Loughlin and Pettapiece.

Summary—First period: No score, penalties—Arbour, Holway and Bellemer. Second period: No score, penalties—J. Arbour, Huggins, Phillips and Neville. Third period: 1, Windsor, J. Arbour (Haynes), 5:00. 2, Windsor, Huggins, 14:00. 3, Windsor, Arbour, 18:30. penalties—Holway, Bellemer (2) and Pettapiece.

Recovering from a hip injury, Milligan says he'll get out of bed in time to be on hand to see the football game for the benefit of the needy between Tech and Duquesne at the Stadium Saturday. He's bought a ticket and he plans to use it himself in person for Mike Milligan.

GIZZY PRIMES FOR BOUT

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Freddie Edwards vs. Ray Lyle, 10 rounds, and Chas. Early vs. Mickey De Palma, 6 rounds, East Liverpool, O.

Joe Ghnouley vs. Johnny Farr, Jackie Horner vs. Jackie Purvis and Dave Barry vs. Ray Nidy, 10 rounds each, and Allen Whitton vs. Leo Terry, 6 rounds, at Louisville.

Eddie Cool vs. Al Rose, 10 rounds, Philadelphia.

Pinto De Sa vs. Charley Miller, 10 rounds, Sacramento, Cal.

From St. Michaels, near Johnstown, comes word that Battling Gizzy, Donora lightweight boxer, is rounding into superb condition there for his 10-round windup battle with Sammy Dorfman, of New York, at Motor Square Garden next Monday night. He is on the road early every morning and works out in the gymnasium with a corps of sparring partners in the afternoon and retires early in the evening.

Gizzy realizes what a victory in this bout means for him. It will lead to more lucrative matches, possibly one with Tony Herrera, and he needs the money following a long layoff, ended recently by a series of tuneup bouts. He will remain in St. Michaels until late Saturday.

Matchmaker Jules Beck today completed the card for Monday night by signing Tony Canzoni, of Cleveland, to box Jimmy Thomas in the eight-round semi-final.

Between Rounds

Jimmy Moore, local Negro middleweight, offers to donate one-fourth of his purse to any relief fund if given a bout with Jack Delaney, of New York, whom the clarden is trying to bring back following his recent victory over Buck McTiernan.

Jeff Burke, of the Carnegie Tech boxing team, will represent Pittsburgh in an international tournament in Boston next Monday night.

The card has been completed for the boxing show to be held in Wheeling next Monday night with Lou Saunders, of Beaver Falls, opposing Midget Mike O'Dowd, of Columbus, in the 10-round windup. Frankie Fantano and Tony Datoli are in the six-round semi-final bill, as is the four-round preliminary. Freddie Boylstein boxes Jackie Herman, Jackie Sullivan meets Battling Ballenger and Young Firpo opposes Tony Rocco.

By stalling around trying to make another match, Motor Square Garden has lost the chance to sign Al Brown, bantamweight champion, for a bout with Mose Butch one week from next Monday night. Brown has accepted a return match with Newsboy Brown in Los Angeles the following night.

MINORS REMOVE MIKE SEXTON

WEST BADEN, Ind., Dec. 3.—(AP)—Minor league owners today adopted a resolution to replace the presidency of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues with a committee of five for a period of one year. The action ended the 22-year reign of President Mike Sexton, of Rock Island, Ill.

Three Grid Banquets Carded Saturday

Folks who like to attend banquets, and grab off invites, can have a swell time running from one to another Saturday night after the Tech-Duke charity game.

First, the Amen Corner is putting on a testimonial affair for officials at Pitt, Tech, Duquesne, Wash-Jeff and Kiski, and also have invited sports editors and football writers and a representative of the Pittsburgh Chapter, Eastern Intercollegiate Football Officials' Association. This will be at the William Penn.

At the P. A. A. the Carnegie Tech athletic council is giving a dinner for the varsity and freshman squads, immediately after the game.

At the same time and the place, the Western Pennsylvania Officials' Association is holding its annual banquet.

CLYDE TO PLAY AGAIN

CINCINNATI, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Clyde Sukeforth, the Cincinnati Reds first string catcher, accidentally shot in the right eye while hunting, was discharged from a hospital yesterday and said he believed he could play ball next spring.

GYM MEET TODAY

Nine schools will have entries in the annual junior high school gymnastic meet at Baxter Junior High today. Tomorrow the senior schools will meet at Connelley Trade School.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Some 15 years ago, two youngsters worked as "catchers" in the tin mill at Port Vue, splitting their daily earnings on a 50-50 basis . . . One of them had a kid brother who was a boxer and he went into the sport as a manager, taking the other one with him . . . The buddies were Bernard Kelly, Jr., and Charley Jones, of McKeesport . . . In time, Jones picked up Tommy Ryan, a young Italian bantamweight, of Duquesne, and piloted him in bouts against Kid Williams, former bantamweight champion; Pal Moore, of Memphis, and Abe Goldstein and other good ones.

Several years later, Kelly left McKeesport for Detroit, where he continued to handle boxers, and he's still in the business. . . . His pal gone, Jones also decided to tear up stakes and move on, and he settled in Louisville, where he handled Midget Mike O'Dowd and other stars, and from there he went on to California and all over the country. . . . Jones fared better than Kelly and made a lot of money, but also succeeded in spending it, and recently he returned here to find that Kelly also was back in the local fold. . . . They met a few nights ago and decided to pool their resources and resume their old partnership.

Bernard Kelly — Charley Jones

As a result, Jones and Kelly now have one of the best "stables" of boxers in the district. . . . It includes Charley Baxter, of Louisville, and Louis DiSantis and Tony Canzoni, of Cleveland, belonging to Jones, and Benny and Buddy McArthur, Jimmy and Frankie Reilly and Marty Simmons, all of McKeesport, and sundry other mittmen signed by Kelly. . . . The joint ownership has entered Buddy McArthur in the N. B. A. light-heavyweight elimination tournament to be fought in the Chicago Stadium, and Jones will handle him in his battles there, and they also plan to build up the various members of their string locally.

"We're both older and have more sense now than when we were kids," Jones said yesterday. . . . "We'll know enough to hold on to any money we make, and also to urge our boxers to do the same thing. . . . With our connections with promoters around the country we should be able to accomplish considerably more working together than we could separately."

A reader, Charles P. M. Simpson, of New Sheffield, Pa., writes anent the record knockout victory of Tony Galento over George Fanka at Motor Square Garden last week that he saw one which he believes would match it on August 15, 1927, at Shibe Park, Philadelphia. . . . It was scored by Wyoming Warner over Johnny Grosso, of New York, the time including the count being announced as 12 seconds. . . . A left hook to the body finished Grosso, whereas it was the same sort of a blow to the jaw that stowed away Panka. . . . And then there was the speedy knockout scored by Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, in one of his first professional fights, at the Duquesne baseball park, several years ago. . . . It was a preliminary affair. . . . Belmont tore out of his corner at the sound of the gong and landed one solid right to the jaw and his opponent went down for the count.

Jules Beck, Motor Square matchmaker, says that if he had been named manager of the Pirates instead of George Gibson he would have predicted the pennant for next year by this time. . . . When the Michigan swimming team comes here for a meet with star local splashers at the Natatorium within the next two weeks, the competition will produce a duel between Jack Denny, of Pitt, and Bob Renner, of Michigan, both members of the Willows Pool, of Oakmont, in the 100-yard free style event. . . . Bill Renner brother of Bob, is a backfield man on the Michigan football team. . . . Ben Bright, local swimming enthusiast, supplies this information.

All set for a laugh? . . . O. K., you shall have it in the news that they've just formed a wrestling association in Massachusetts to "save" the sport from the hands of outsiders such as boxing commissions and other constituted authorities. . . . The main trouble with the point system whereby the W. P. I. A. L. decides its football champions is that most of the people can't see the point. . . . It is entirely possible that more big game laughs itself to death at the poor marksmanship of the average hunter than is shot to death, believe it or not.—HARRY KECK.

South Hills High School will honor its City League football champions and Shady Side Academy will pay tribute to its soccer and football teams at banquets to be held tonight at the two schools.

Prof. C. F. McCready will be toastmaster at the South Hills affair, while Capt. Palmer will serve in a similar capacity at Shady Side Academy.

Jess Carver, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, and Coach Elmer Layden, of Duquesne University, will be the speakers at Shady Side Academy. Tomorrow the Shady Side gridders will be guests at the annual football dance.

C. Lawrence Walsh, supervisor of athletics in the city high schools, will be the principal speaker at South Hills. Others on the program are R. E. Winners, principal; Coach E. J. Mazeski, Capt. Ricco Macellaro and Faculty Manager James W. Mates, who will present letters to the members of the team. The affair is being held under the auspices of the Student Co-Operative Association.

SCOTT HIGH BUSY

Johnny Reed, coach at Scott High, North Braddock, defending state basketball champion, is hard at work trying to make replacements in his floor machine.

The North Braddock quintet faces one of the toughest schedules arranged for any of the district high school teams.

Reed lost Tomko and Kuno from last year's championship aggregation, and Vic Bache will be missing after January 27, leaving three big holes in his regular lineup.

Besides their usual number of games in Section VIII, of the W. P. I. A. L., two big trips are in store for the North Braddock quintet.

New Castle will be met in New Castle on December 18, while Erie Academy will be played in the Lake City the following night.

A three-day tour of the eastern part of the state is planned for the latter part of December. Steelton, for years one of the outstanding high school basketball teams in the state, will be played on December 30. Negotiations have been opened to play Harrisburg and Williamsport on the same trip. Harrisburg is sought for December 29 and Williamsport for January 1.

SHADY SIDE PREPARES

Russell W. Davis, coach at Shady Side Academy, must rebuild his team for the basketball campaign. William Fettermen, captain-elect, did not return to school and a new leader will be appointed. Allison Maxwell, center and forward, is the only letterman available from last year's team.

The Fox Chapel passers inaugurate their season on December 10 with Dormont as their attraction.

Nichols School will be met here on February 20 and University School in Cleveland on March 5. The complete schedule:

December 10—Dormont. December 15—Erie. January 8—Perry. January 12—Century. January 15—Kiski. January 16—Edgewood. January 19—Carrick. January 22—Oakmont. January 26—At Butler. The banquet will be held the latter part of next week, the time and place to be announced later. The cup will be placed on exhibition after Saturday's game downtown.

Another announcement of great interest to all lovers of gridiron sport was that which came from the office of Clarence (Daddy) Overend, graduate manager of athletics at Tech, who stated that the popular Lib Lewis, right end of the Plaid squad, who suffered a fractured leg in the Notre Dame game, would attend Saturday's tilt in a wheel chair. Lewis will be brought from the Montefiore Hospital to the Stadium in an ambulance and wheeled to the Tech bench by comrades. It will be the first time he has left the hospital since the mishap.

Shaw's Play for Next Year Stirs Up a Flood Of Anecdotes

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Word comes from the Malvern Festival Committee that a new play by Bernard Shaw will be ready for next summer. Sir Barry Jackson, who has taken Henry Irving's place in the British theater, says the play will be called "Too True to Be Good." If Shaw continues to stir up hornets as he has by the publication of Ellen Terry's so called love letters and by the broadcasting of his views on Russia and America he need not worry about inviting the critics. They'll be there.

Meantime a new batch of stories about Shaw has been set afloat. Mrs. Claude Beddington tells how the hostess of a musical party asked him:

"What do you think of the violinist?" to which Shaw replied: "He reminds me of Paderewski." The bewildered lady said:

George Seibel

"But Paderewski's not a violinist!" "Neither is this gentleman," said Shaw.

SHAW'S MUSICAL GHOST

Another friend of Shaw's in a reminiscent mood relates the dramatist, who started as a music critic, as a sort of spirit-ualistic medium.

Shaw was visiting a friend in Wimbledon when the talk turned upon spirit music. Shaw was sitting in the half-light with his back to the piano when weird but beautiful music was heard. He professed to be astounded at these mysterious sounds and the host was so deeply impressed that he wrote a letter to the papers describing the phenomena and mentioning Shaw's name as a witness. Next day Shaw confessed that he had himself been playing the piano with his hands behind his back.

NO MUSIC AT MEALS

While Shaw is very fond of music, and one of his boosts is The Perfect Wagnerite, shows his knowledge of it, he detests music with his meals.

Once he called to the leader of the Gypsy Band which was making the usual deafening and distracting noises in a restaurant:

"Could you play something if I asked you to?" "But certainly, Monsieur." "Well, would you play either poker or dominoes—whichever you like—until I have finished my dinner?"

AFRAID TO BE PRESIDENT

The same Mrs. Beddington who told about the unlucky violinist considers Shaw a much misunderstood man. One day she heard a lady say:

"That man ought to be well sat on by somebody! What do you think?" I said to him. 'Oh, Mr. Shaw! Why ever don't you go over to the States and do a lecture tour there? You would make a fortune out of it. I know Americans are simply dying to hear you.' And Mr. Shaw replied: 'I am constantly being asked to lecture in America, but the reason I don't go there is that I'm frightened the Americans will insist as soon as I land on making me President of the United States'. Just think, the conceit of the creature!"

Mrs. Beddington adds, for the guidance of English and American readers: "Now, when we Irish make a truly outrageous statement (such as this), we make it because we never expect to be believed."

Nancy Carroll, Arlen In 'Wayward'

Production of "Wayward," started at Paramount's New York studio recently when Director Edward Sloman took Nancy Carroll, Richard Arlen, Pauline Frederick and the remainder of the cast on a three-day location trip to Huntington, L. I. Upon completion of the exterior sequences in dismal weather, the company returned to the studio for interiors.

Notes About Coming Films

Over the Hill," co-starring James Dunn, Sally Eilers and Mae Marsh, comes to the Stanley today. This is the talking version of the famous silent movie.

In "The Cuban Love Song," Lawrence Tibbett's latest starring talkie coming to the Fulton today, he sings a number of melodies, including "From the Halls of Montezuma," official ballad of the Marine Corps. He and Lupe Velez are also heard in the Cuban version of "The Peanut Vender," as a comedy episode.

GABLE-CRAWFORD FILM

Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are teamed for the first time in "Possessed," the drama of a factory girl who lands in Park avenue, arriving tomorrow in the Penn. Miss Crawford plays the role made famous by Florence Reed on the legitimate stage in the original production titled "The Mirage."

Rabbis in the City of Pittsburgh have been invited to attend the opening performance in the Davis tomorrow of "The Dreyfus Case," screen story of one of the world's most sensational trials. Dreyfus was the captain in the French army who was convicted of selling valuable government information to the Germans and was sentenced to solitary confinement on Devil's Island.

Joan Blondell and James Cagney are teamed in "Blonde Crazy," coming to the Warner Saturday. In the film they are out to cheat the cheaters.

OTHER BOOKINGS

"Chinatown After Dark" and "Smart Woman" will comprise the double bill in the Harris beginning Saturday. Rex Lease, Barbara Kent and Carmel Myers are in the former film; Mary Astor, Edward Everett Horton and Robert Ames are in "Smart Woman."

The Enright will offer George Bancroft in "Rich Man's Folly" for three days opening Saturday. "Touchdown" comes to that theater on the following Wednesday.

A new Ufa sound film, "A Student's Song of Heidelberg," is announced as the attraction in the Avenue Cinema, Pittsburgh's foreign language movie house, for the week beginning Monday. The picture is a musical comedy.

Runway specialties will be an added feature with the new Columbia burlesque, "Hi Ho Everybody," coming to the Academy Sunday midnight. George Carroll, Flora White, Eddie Lloyd and Marie Oliver head the cast.

James Dunn, Janet Gaynor To Be Co-Featured In New Film

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 3.

Out at Fox, they're going right on casting pictures despite a thriving crop of rumors.

James Dunn, whose popularity is mounting, will play opposite Janet Gaynor in "Have a Heart," the Buddy De Sylva musical romance. Production on this picture will start on Janet's return from Europe. David Butler will direct.

According to letters received in Hollywood, Janet and her husband and mother will spend Christmas in Paris and New Years in Rome. They will sail for home shortly after the first of the year.

James Dunn

Charlie Ruggles forgot to carry his overcoat to the football game the other day. He says it was so cold you could see the breath coming out of the loud speakers.

LATEST GOSSIP

Saw Dolores Del Rio at Edmund Goulding's wedding reception. She says Paramount may plan to have her do "The Broken Wing," but she isn't sold on the idea. What with "The Dove" and now "The Bird of Paradise," she thinks she has had enough of birds. . . . This reception was attended by three times as many stars as you can see at a premiere. . . . Norma Shearer, Ruth Chatterton, Billie Dove were there. Lots of others. Ed Goulding, man of the world and formerly one of Hollywood's most confirmed bachelors, says he's in love like a schoolboy. Don't blame him either. The bride is charming. . . . Lupe Velez got up out of bed to come to the reception. She is the despair of doctors. . . . Dorothy Burgess has red hair now, and it is mighty becoming. . . . Wesley Ruggles' Pickford contract is up today. His next option calls for an increase. There is argument about it. . . . Anyway, Arline Judge will remain with Radio. They just took up her contract. . . . Carl Laemmle, Jr., brought a German cook back from New York.

PARAMOUNT HAS NEW SETUP

The new production lineup at Paramount will divide responsibility among six men, they say. Twelve pictures each will be handled by B. P. Schulberg, Barney Glazer, Louis Lighton, Hector Turnbull, E. Lloyd Sheldon and Percy Heath. The cream of the stories go to Schulberg.

LLOYD'S PLANS

With Playwright Vincent Lawrence called in to help dialogue Harold Lloyd's Hollywood story, it looks as if the comedian will not get under way until after the first of the year. Lawrence has suggested several changes in the script, one of which will call for a more sophisticated heroine. This means a new search for an actress to play the part. Incidentally, it is said to be a much stronger role than usually falls to Harold's leading women.

In the meanwhile, Harold moves his family back in their Beverly Hills home today. They have spent the summer and fall at the beach.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Fifty years from now folks probably will be reading something like the following: "The season of 1980 was the first in 60 years in which there was no performance of 'Blossom Time.' We figger it will take that long for the popular operetta, which comes to the Alvin next week, to wear out. We judge that from the rate at which it is going this season, when, after a decade of success, it still is the favorite among all musical stage offerings.

Rachel Crothers, who authored "As Husbands Go," next week's Theater Guild subscription play in the Nixon, has been playwrighting for a cupla decades. Among the offspring of her brain that rated as hits have been "Old Lady 31," "Mother Carey's Chickens," "39 East," "Nice People," "Expressing Willie" and "Let Us Be Gay."

Small Timer says that "if" provides more problems in life than "it".

Prof. Elmer Kenyon's fine acting company (drama studies of Tech) will present "Kismet," in the theater of the College of Fine Arts, Tech Campus, for one week, beginning Saturday. This drama by Edward Knoblock served as a starring vehicle for Otis Skinner during four of his best years. It will be the third production of the season by Prof. Kenyon's proteges.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Gee! . . . The irony of it! . . . For once I defended a fellow from an attack—and what happened? . . . Haw! . . . I am sued for slander! . . . On my chapped lips! . . . And it was nothing that I penned! . . . I can't sleep from laughing about it . . . And, after all I've got away with! . . . I'll be scared stiff henceforth when writing a compliment . . . So that's what you get for being a constructive critic, eh? . . . Where's my stiletto? . . . Get me my pitchfork! . . . Where the deuce is my shotgun? . . . Look, they're all rusty! . . . Everybody's no good—that's my theme song from now on . . . What do you mean Eugene O'Neill is clever? . . . Who said so? . . . How do you figger that out? . . . What makes you think George Jean Nathan can write? . . . Do you call what he writes writing? . . . Huh! . . . Look at that painting by Rembrandt! . . . Ja ever see such tripe? . . . What do you mean Garbo can act? . . . You call those legs that Dietrich is always having photographed—legs? . . . Hisses! . . . There, now!

Hmm. Bob Ames gone, now . . . Hadn't seen him since that sunrise at Gunnan's asylum when my face got so red! . . . That was one time I couldn't think of an answer . . . As ashamed as a fox caught in a trap! . . . I had written a review on a show in which he appeared at the Little Theater . . . Seed. I think they titled it . . . Bob played two parts—early in the show as the young husband—and later as the same husband grown middle-aged . . . His acting was good, I said, but he wasn't the type . . . He was too young-looking to play the role of a father who had a grown son! . . . So the following night he evened matters at Gunnan's . . . He never mentioned the review . . . He merely said: "Hello, kid. Meet my son!" . . . A boy, at least 20!

Wonder why it is every time a word becomes popular some publicity-hungry abba-dabba breaks into print with his argument that the words, or expression, isn't new, at all . . . If any exclamation is strictly 1900-and-something, the expression "O, yeah!" certainly is! . . . No, I take that back—how do I know? . . . But that English prof of Newark tells a Milwaukee group that the expression was born 1,400 years ago . . . He says, too, that the present "O, yeah!" very likely is from the "yea" in the Bible . . . Oh, sure!!! . . . Didn't good old Doctor Vizetelly point out that "Whoopee" is from Shakespeare's "Upe"? . . . I still have a stitch in my side from that one . . . Whoopee, the Dr. told the Times, was at least 300 years old . . . He never would explain why the editors of the dictionary waited 300 years before including it under the W's . . . or W. W's.

Ripley would like knowing it . . . I mean about Jack Lait, who says he has everything a man would want . . . Wonder how many others could say the same? . . . Lait has a wife, sons, daughters, granddaughters, a mother and father and grandparents! . . . He has a job, a home, a bankbook and money in the bank! . . . He also has a swell rep as a newspaperman, his own teeth and says he is happy . . . He has a car, a chauffeur, enough enemies to make him important in the community—but he has more pals! . . . Golly! What a man! . . . There very likely isn't another guy like him . . . Oh, yes, and what a sensayuma! . . . He says everything was all right, until the slump hit the Depression! . . . But, what depression? . . . Jack Lait has Everything!!!

They all left me alone with Burns Mantle on "Payment Deferred," but I feel better now . . . Not because it closed, but because it turned out to be the bust they said it wouldn't be . . . "House of Connelly," too . . . I was alone on that one . . . What raves! . . . For what? . . . You couldn't even hear the actors in that show from the 5th row . . . And "The Good Companions," which I liked, and the boys all tried to murder, lasted just as long and probably made more money . . . The next thing I want to learn is why that very dull show with the so-called "greatest score" is still here . . . No wonder I lost interest in going to them . . . I felt certain that I didn't know the good ones from the garbage any more, the way I was stranded with my opinions day in and day out for a fortnight . . . I told Atkinson that night at the Golden that I thought newspapers ought to have new reviewers every season—fellows with fresh points of view—chaps who got a kick out of going to the new plays . . . The theater, I told him, would benefit by such a move . . . "No," said Atkinson, "why send amateurs to report them? You wouldn't send for a young doctor who just graduated if you were ill, would you?"

Wonder what Lya de Putti's tormentors are thinking about? . . . I mean those who made her last days unhappy ones? . . . There probably is something to what the papers are saying—about her trying to knock herself off, at that . . . People who have the miseries must want to die . . . After she and her friend Called It a Day and she went to Bermuda to dodge the finger-pointers, Lya had herself a mess of trouble . . . First, the officials took up the deportation angle—because, they argued, Lya's time was up . . . Seems to me I ran something about certain ill-wishers of Lya's trying to have her deported next March—because the quota was filled or something . . . What a lovely run-around they were giving her—and intended to hand her when she came out of the hosp.

And now she's gone . . . Well, her enemies won't have to bother about getting her out of the country, now.

Those gooey with false sentiment reporters give me a pain . . . In reporting Lya's funeral they blazed away with yappy headlines and text: "Broadway Forgets!" . . . "Lya De Putti Snubbed by Pals!" . . . "More Curiosity Seekers Than Friends Say Good-by!" and such applesauce . . . Were the millions that clogged Broadway during Valentino's funeral his friends?—or curiosity seekers? . . . Lya had very few true friends, anyhow . . . She wasn't so famous, . . . She was in one well-known film, "Variety," and several ordinary ones . . . Maybe she had two good ones . . . No actress, or actor, perhaps, ever received such a shellacking from the dramatic critics as did Lya when she opened in a play at the Cort, which lasted three nights because she couldn't stand the humiliation and she walked out! . . . The reviewers were merciless—not so much to the author as to the star . . . Besides, Miss De Putti wasn't Broadway'd into a huge funeral . . . Nobody thought to have the drums rolled—everybody neglected to have a blanket of flowers with Pola Negri's name on it . . . We haven't any more great press agents around town, they're all dead in various cemeteries, or in the Broadway Graveyard . . . You can't get a big writeup or a crowd at your funeral in New York, you dope, unless you know the right people—who know how to promote it the right way . . . It's all promotion, you sap! . . . Before Valentino died, his alleged best pals used to say: "So what? I knew him when he was a tango dancer in a joint. Now he's supposed to be a sheik!" . . . Those same belittlers were in the honorary pallbearer division—up front—in focus of the news cameras . . . No, Lya De Putti didn't rate all that fuss—and didn't want it—when she couldn't hear, see or enjoy it . . . She died because she wanted to.

Giants Keep Lindstrom. Rabbit Ball Passing.
Baseball Salaries Cut. Plaid's Worries Grow.
High Still Serviceable. Ranking Heavyweights.

M'GRAW TO TRY FREDDIE AT SECOND

AS REGULARLY AS winter comes round, the rumor gets going in baseball circles that Freddie Lindstrom is about to be traded by the New York Giants. The story usually runs that he's in bad with John McGraw and that the latter is determined to get rid of him. And just as regularly, it turns out to be only one of the annual off-season pieces of diamond fiction. Spring finds Lindstrom back on his old job and fighting his head off for the manager from whom he was reported to have become estranged.

Freddie Lindstrom

The same old stuff has just been heard over again, and with the same old finish. First it was said Lindstrom was to go to Cincinnati for Pitcher Red Lucas, and next came the tale that he was headed for the Braves in a swap for Outfielder Walter Berger. Manager McGraw now spikes both yarns and all others of a similar nature with the emphatic statement that Lindy will not be traded to any club for anybody, but will stay right where he is on the Giant roster, not only for 1932 but as long as he is able to play big league ball.

M'GRAW SUPPLEMENTS THE trade denial with an announcement that he is planning another shift for Lindstrom next year. Last season he moved Freddie from third base to the outfield, and now he means to try him at second base.

"Lindstrom is going to stay with the Giants as long as he can play ball," McGraw declared. "I feel reasonably sure he will succeed at second base, where he will be a fixture in case Critz does not recover the use of his throwing arm. If Freddie doesn't succeed there he can return to the outfield, where he developed into one of the best last season. He'll be a regular somewhere, that's certain. He's too good a hitter to be left off my team."

RUMORS OF THE last two months that baseball salaries were due for a downward revision in 1932 were borne out by the action of the three Class AA leagues at West Baden in urging "drastic cuts" in players' pay. The American Association is already considering a proposal to fix the limit at $600 per month.

That the smaller minor leagues will follow suit in reducing wages is considered certain, but that there will be any general cut in the majors as the result of an organized movement is doubtful.

SLIPPING VETERANS AND reserves who can be replaced probably will come in for cuts, but there will hardly be any general tampering with the pay of the stars or the established regulars. Individual values differ too greatly, both as to playing ability and drawing power—as in the case of Babe Ruth as compared with other players, for instance—to permit of anything like a fixed rate for all athletes in the big show. Some, such as Pepper Martin as a notable example, are due for increases rather than reductions, which is the situation annually. There are any number of items and circumstances that make the majors different from the minors, and it is hard to see how there could be anything like a general rate in the big show where salaries range from $3,000 or $4,000 up to Ruth's $80,000.*

Andy High

NOBODY KNOWS THE value of a piece of baseball property as well as the man who owns it, and no doubt the Cardinal bosses know what they're doing, but the average fan finds it difficult to understand why they were so eager to get rid of Third Baseman Andy High.

Failing in an attempt to railroad High to the minors last year because Andy refused to go, the St. Louis management has now sold him to the Reds. Even if he can't be made to fit in as a regular, there are poorer reserves than High on every club in the league, and on the score of pinch-hitting and delivering in emergencies they don't come any better. He ought to be of considerable help to Cincinnati.

ON ALL SIDES the lively ball is on the way out. Though the fact was not made public when the American Association announced at its recent meeting that it had decided to retain the same make of ball used in 1931, it is learned that the manufacturers have been instructed to take the rabbit out of the pill and furnish a sphere similar to that used in the National League.

The lively rocket kept up batting averages in the Association last season. In several instances, big league owners refused to pay the prices asked for players on the ground that the rabbit ball prevented accurate estimates of their worth as hitters.

THE LOSS OF the services of Angelo Bevevino for the [illegible] charity football game with the Dukes at the Stadium Saturday afternoon is a hard blow to Carnegie Tech and adds to the difficulties which the Tartans are likely to experience in their first meeting with the up and coming Bluffites. Though not the starting quarterback, Bevevino has performed at every opportunity in a manner to mystify the fans as to why he wasn't in the lineup regularly. Carnegie will miss him Saturday at a time when they're apt to need all the strength they can muster.

JUST HOW EASY it is for an experienced wrestler to defeat one of the football strong men, when he really wants to do so, which unfortunately isn't always, was made clear in the recent match on the coast in which Strangler Lewis became the winner over Joe Savoldi as soon as he decided to end the match.

When Savoldi had tried a series of flying tackles, which Lewis easily evaded for the third and deciding fall, the Strangler grabbed him and hoisted him in the air by the feet. After a short period of letting Joe's head hover above the canvas, Lewis merely dumped him and fell on him to get the decision. It will be remembered that when Lewis lost to Gus Sonnenberg in Boston he professed to be very much afraid of those flying tackles and protested them as illegal and unfair. You can see now what a terrible worry they are to him.

IT IS NOT surprising that fight managers insist on rating their own boxers among the leaders, whether the ranking is deserved or not. That's only business, or publicity. But it is surprising how they can differ on the merits of other battlers.

For instance, Leon See, manager of Primo Carnera, puts Max Schmeling fifth on the heavyweight list, ranking him behind Jack Sharkey, Carnera and Mickey Walker, and even Larry Gains, while Harry Lenny didn't think enough of Victorio Campolo before the latter quit the ring yesterday to list him among the first 16.

Leon See

ASKED BY A New York boxing critic to rank the heavyweights, See placed Jack Sharkey on top, with his own man, Carnera, right behind him, followed by Mickey Walker, Larry Gaine, Max Schmeling, Young Stribling, Tommy Loughran, Ernie Schaaf, Tuffy Griffiths, Stanley Poreda, Walter Cobb, Paulino Uzcudun and Victorio Campolo. He did not consider Max Baer worth mentioning. When Lenny, who manages Paul Swiderski, was told of See's list, he asked where See had placed Swiderski. "He doesn't even mention Swiderski," Harry was told. "Why, the man is nothing but a shoemaker." Lenny exploded. "Here, I'll give you a rating that means something." And he wrote 16 down in this order: Schmeling, Sharkey, Walker, Loughran, Schaaf, Griffiths, Carnera, Stribling, Paulino, Baer, Swiderski, Poreda, Johnny Risko, Cobb, King Levinsky and Babe Hunt.

TAD JONES PICKS BOTH QUATSE, MACMURDO

By TAD JONES

Member, All-America Board of Football. Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

The high quality of football as played in the East this year makes the selection of an all-Eastern eleven the most difficult in years. In making my selection for the year 1931 I have taken into consideration the all-around ability of the man chosen together with his mental characteristics and have confined by choice to only those players whom I myself have seen in action. I have weighed too the strength and nature of the opposition for individual strength is relative.

Jess Quatse

In the center position the range of choice is very wide. The group includes such players as Daugherty of Pitt, McDuffee, of Columbia; Reuter of Lafayette; Chalmers of N. Y. U., and many others. McDuffee is my first choice. He is an inspirational player, strong and rugged and very aggressive. A fine passer and very quick at diagnosing plays, he leads the field defensively.

The Mid-Western Team selected by Jesse Harper, Notre Dame athletic director and member of the All-America Board of Football, will appear in tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Hoffman, of Dartmouth, and Summerfelt, of Army, are named for the guard positions. There are other guards who rank with these men, among them Grenda, of Columbia; Rotan, of Yale; Myerson, of Harvard, and Dubofsky, of Georgetown, but for reliability of play the first two named lead the field. Hoffman is a rugged chap, very fast and alert. Summerfelt lacks somewhat in speed, but more than makes up for this in earnestness and dependability.

NAMES PITT PAIR

For the tackle positions, I name without hesitation MacMurdo, of Pittsburgh, and also Quatse, of the same eleven. There are other great tackles also—Hardy, of Harvard; Wilbur, of Yale; Newton, of Syracuse; Scheibel, of Colgate; Price, of Army, and Wermuth, of Lafayette, but MacMurdo and Quatse are the class of a brilliant field—and I doubt if a finer pair could be found anywhere. They are strong and alert, with speed a plenty down the field and impregnable on the defensive.

Orsi, of Colgate, and Barres, of Yale, are named as ends on this eleven. This is a very flashy pair, very dependable. They possess great speed. In blocking a tackle, covering kicks and open-field tackling they have no superiors in the East. They are great receivers of the forward pass, breaking into position with great deception and speed, and, if able to get a hand on the ball, are sure to make the catch. Their alertness and agility make them outstanding as defensive ends as well. Colucci and Cavalieri, of Holy Cross; Hugret, of New York University; Conroy, of Fordham; Riblett, of Penn, and Ellert, of Syracuse, are splendid ends.

WOOD AT QUARTER

The most difficult position of all to fill is the quarterback job. The quarterback who never made a mistake is yet to be discovered. Proper direction is essential to winning football. This means intelligent use of the kicking game, successful maneuvering for position on the field and other important points. Wood, of Harvard is my first choice, and he is closely followed by Morton, of Dartmouth; Ferraro, of Cornell, and Parker, of Yale. This selection is made on the splendid record which Wood has turned in through the entire season. He is a beautiful forward passer and an excellent defensive player, and has all of the qualities of leadership so necessary in a quarterback.

Booth, of Yale, and Crickard, of Harvard, will find the halfback positions, with Viviano, of Cornell, at fullback. Both would do the kicking in this combination.

Here is a combination that meets every demand of speed, cleverness and power on the attack and possesses great ability in the passing and kicking games, together with defensive strength of unusual degree.

LOCAL MEN PICKED

McCall, of Dartmouth; Stecker, of Army; Murphy, of Fordham; Lassiter, of Yale; McNamara, of N. Y. U.; Reider and Heller, of Pittsburgh; Crowley, of Yale, and Armentrout, of Carnegie Tech, all are fine backs and very close to those named.

Following Viviano are Litster, of Colgate; Abee, of N. Y. U.; Lasich, of Penn State, and Hinkle, of Bucknell.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY; WHERE YOU TRAVEL SIX MILES TO PROGRESS ONE—Because of the steep mountains in the Roldal Valley, Norway, highway engineers found it necessary to construct so many "switchbacks" to make an even grade that on the new road a traveler goes back and forth six miles to make one mile of progress. This road is typical of several highways which recently have been constructed in Norway and Sweden. In the United States, we have a number of such roads in the Alleghanies, Rockies and Sierra Nevadas. THE BOTTLE-BALANCER—J. Emil Huttunen's remarkable feat of equilibrium has been caught by the eye of the camera. It required eight years of constant practice before he mastered this balancing stunt. The story, accompanied by a photograph, was contributed by Mrs. Taylor Wood, of Quincy, Mass., a cousin of the performer.

DUKES, SKIBOS WIND UP HARD PRACTICE

By JESS CARVER

The people of Pittsburgh are following in the footsteps of the college football players they cheer, the Pitts, the Techs and the Dukes, by crashing the line in this big charity game proposition in true all-America style. My nomination for an all-America berth this year goes to every man, woman and child who lays it on the line and attends the Carnegie-Duquesne charity game in the Stadium Saturday.

Bevevino

Pittsburgh football players ever have ranked with the champions of the sport. No city in the country has contributed more heavily to the gridiron Hall of Fame than this one. And now, the city is going to put over its fine charity gesture in great style. The seat sale to date indicates this, promises a turnout of between 30,000 and 35,000 and prepares the way for Pa Pitt to hand himself a resounding slap on the back when the proceeds of the encounter are turned over to the relief of the unemployed.

GAME GOING OVER

It is pretty swell to sit back and realize that Pittsburghers, even with the depression what it is and with the outlook for winter far from rosy, are rallying to sport's great cry . . . the ringing cry of . . .

"Play ball!"

If Pittsburgh's response to the cry of need is heeded and matched throughout the land, the result will be a decisive rout for the bleak days and Ol' Man Depression.

Carnegie's varsity squad received a tough break yesterday when Angelo Bevevino, reserve quarterback, was called home to the bedside of his dad, who was accidentally shot while deer hunting. The little quarter deeply regretted having to desert his mates at this time, but there was no other way out and the Tartan officials insisted on his leaving. He will remain with his stricken parent until the danger is passed and will not be back for the game.

Today both squads will wind up their rough and heavy work for the game. Tomorrow will be devoted to tapering off. Yesterday Coach Waddell hid his players from sight behind the big canvas screen in the Tartan bowl and gave them a thorough workout. They'd sewed up my favorite peephole, so I didn't get a look-see, and for once in his life, Der Maxie Hannum, the Tech publicity gent, refused to talk.

"Don't worry," quoth Der Maxie. "You boys will get to see all Saturday afternoon, and don't forget to shoot that buck-fifty along for your ducat, either."

DUKES CONFIDENT

Meanwhile, the Dukes were drilling hard on the Bluff, also behind closed doors. Coaches Layden and Bach, who have labored so hard and faithfully piloting the Dukes through its strenuous campaign, are putting on extra steam and endeavoring to arouse their charges to the old fighting pitch just once more.

It is silly to think that the Bluffites haven't a chance. Those Dukes have a chance against any ball club, because they know how to fight. They are derned good "money" players, rising to the occasion of an important game like a seal for a fresh mackerel. Ask Georgetown, Western Maryland, Holy Cross, West Virginia, Washington-Jeff and North Dakota if you don't think so.

LAYTON, LAURI DEFEATED

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Two "first-timers" in top tournament play stepped into the limelight of the world's pocket billiard championships yesterday with victories over a former world champion and the holder of the high-run tourney record.

Al Miller, Racine (Wis.) youngster, emerged from a grueling 29-inning match with a 126-to-110 victory over Johnny Layton, Sedalia, Mo., former champion, while George Kelly, Philadelphia, had less difficulty with Onofrio Lauri, of Brooklyn, winning, 125 to 79, in 11 innings.

Marcel Camp, of Detroit, defeated Benny Allen, of Kansas City, 125 to 96, in nine innings.

Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, defending champion, followed Camp in a second-round victory when he defeated Spencer Livsey, of Los Angeles, 125 to 77, in 16 innings.

CHARITY BALL TO BE SOLD

Developments in the post-season benefit football game plans came thick and fast yesterday, indicating an enormous throng at the Stadium on Saturday to witness the first gridiron contest between Carnegie Institute of Technology and Duquesne University.

Among other things it was announced by R. S. McCarty, chairman of the promotion committee, that the ball used in the game would be auctioned immediately after the game on Saturday, by Elmer Layden, of the Bluff institution, and Judge Wally Steffen, of the Plaids. McCarty made this announcement upon hearing that Judge Steffen had wired saying he would be in Pittsburgh for this game. This sale will be held in front of sections 1 and 36.

Another announcement of interest was that emanating from the Homewood shops of the Pittsburgh Railways Company to the effect that every man in the shops, to the number of 233, had purchased tickets for Saturday's battle, and this announcement also included the fact that these men had painted one of the low-floor cars in the colors of the Plaid and the Duquesne Red and Blue. This car will be operated over the

DUKES BATTLE Y. M. H. A. FIVE

The Morrys opened their West Penn League season last night by chopping out a 38-32 win over the Penn Five, in the South Side Market House. The Goodwill Seniors tripped the Falcons, 16-15, and Goodwill Juniors topped the Guy Bennetts, 19-15, in the Metropolitan League.

St. Miachel's won from St. Ann's, 29-28, in the Lyceum League.

W. & J. HONORS TECH STAR

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 3.—Bucknell University was honored today with three places on the all-opponent team of Washington and Jefferson College. The entire varsity squad voted for the best opponents they have faced in their hard 10-game schedule this fall.

In picking the most valuable man of the opponents, the opinion was divided, only one vote separating each of the leading three, Armentrout, Pincura and Battles, in order. The W. & J. selection:

First team: Hunter, Marshall, and Stonebraker, Bucknell, ends; Pincura, Western Maryland, and Nied, Bucknell, tackles; Barnett, Western Maryland, and Blondin, West Virginia Wesleyan, guards; Reuter, Lafayette, center; Johnson, Temple, quarter; Battles, West Virginia Wesleyan, and Armentrout, Carnegie Tech, halves; Hinkle, Bucknell, fullback.

Second team: Sortet, West Virginia, and Fry, Bucknell, ends; Cook, Lafayette, and Radusky, Western Maryland, tackles; Heiner, Carnegie Tech, and Mazzei, West Virginia, guards; Krueger, Marquette, center; Cook, West Virginia, quarter; Ravel, Carnegie Tech, and Mezza, Bucknell, halfbacks; Wilcox, Lafayette, fullback.

Honorable mention: Stewart, Carnegie Tech, end; Kample, guard of the same team; Parriott, West Virginia, halfback, and Koppe, Western Maryland, fullback.

Ramsey Captains Tartan Harriers

Grant Wilbur Ramsey, of Washington, Pa., has been elected captain of Carnegie Tech's varsity cross-country team for 1932. He will succeed Jess Price, of Pittsburgh, who has been captain for two seasons and who holds the Tartan cross-country record.

The following members of this year's team won the varsity "C": Capt. Price, Capt.-elect Ramsey, Schell, Allen, Burns and Stankey.

BOY GRIDDER DIES

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Injuries suffered in playing football caused the death Monday of George O. Furry, 15, in a hospital here.

GRID DATE OPEN

Carnegie High School has Friday, November 11, open at home on next year's football schedule. Any class B school desiring this date call Carnegie 262.

The Tipoff

Cholly Johnson, of the Steubville Republican, has selected his annual all-district team, which always is very much worth while. On this year's first team, Cholly has Aultman and Ifft, of Geneva, at ends; Franks, of Thiel, and Crites, of West Virginia Wesleyan at the tackles; Foll, of Grove City, and Waite, of Allegheny, at the guards, and Ransom, of Geneva, in at center.

In the backfield, he has honored Battles, of Wesleyan; Berger and Garbarik, of Allegheny, and Grahame, of Geneva.

The only mistake Cholly made was in putting Red Crites, of Wesleyan, who never played any place but a guard, as a tackle.

Two members of the Pitt team picked the Army over Notre Dame, and one of 'em laid it on the line to back up their opinions. Rip Collins, the end, declared he wouldn't bet a dime against the Cadets. Bobby Hogan, the quarterback, wagered on the Ray-Dets.

I saw one all-America team that was a pip. The selector evidently had a very warm spot in his heart for Cliff Aultman, the Geneva end star. He had his end jobs filled, so he put Cliff in at a guard. How Cliff would love that.

If the millions and millions of Tipoff readers are on needles and pins waiting for my all-America, they're going to be stuck for a long time. I'm through, washed up, finished, with all-star football teams. I think there are four players in the country deserving of all-America mention. They are Daugherty, of Pitt; Schwartz, of Notre Dame; Battles, of West Virginia Wesleyan, and Joe Kurth, of Notre Dame.

AMBRIDGE HIGH OPEN

Ambridge High is open for a basketball game away from home with a first-class high school team on December 26. Call Coach Rubenstein at Ambridge High.

The real All-America Team, selected by the All-America Board, consisting of Glenn Warner, Tad Jones, Bill Alexander and Jess Harper, will watch for it exclusively in next Sunday's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

STOCK MARKET LIST TURNS UPWARD

Recovery Accomplished As Pressure Lightens, But Trading Turns Dull

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Pressure was lifted from financial markets today, and some recovery was accomplished, but trading turned dull.

The stock market's stubborn resistance to breaking through the bear market bottom of early October, together with talk of rumors that a constructive announcement might be forthcoming from Washington, prompted considerable short covering.

The leading rails rallied rather smartly after some hangover liquidation was absorbed in the morning.

Net gains of about 2 to 3 points appeared in the afternoon in such issues as Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, New York Central and Union Pacific, while issues up a point or more included Chesapeake & Ohio, New Haven, Frisco, Northern Pacific and others.

Industrials and utilities rose a point or two, included United States Steel, American Telephone, American Can, North American, Case, Woolworth, Consolidated Gas, American Tobacco B, Lorillard, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Lambert, United States Industrial Alcohol and others.

After recovering from the first shock of the Wabash receivership, Wall street took a more hopeful view of the railroad situation.

Prominent bankers who discussed the railroad outlook said that the plight of a few of the so-called feeder lines should not be taken as an indication of the railroad situation generally.

The weekly bank statements showed a rather sharp drop in the Bank of England's reserve ratio, which fell 5 points to a new low at 28.4 per cent, but this was due primarily to a gain of 14,000,000 in circulation necessitated by the December 1 settlements. There have been some rumors of official support for sterling exchange in the last day or two, but confirmation has been lacking.

The New York money market was virtually unchanged, with a slightly easier tone in call money. Outside money was available at 2 per cent, against 2¼ to 2½ yesterday.

Currency Reflects British Situation

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—The uncertainty existing in banking circles as to where the English pound will find its level now that Great Britain is off the gold standard was reflected here today in the terms upon which British currency could be bought or sold in small amounts.

There was 30 cents difference between the price at which two of the city's largest tourist agencies sold actual pound notes in transactions of a few hundred dollars and the price which those same agencies paid for them in dollars. Formerly the difference was five cents.

Says No Textile Crisis Exists In England

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Fred Mills, president of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners, stated at Manchester that the recent action taken by employers in giving notice to terminate the agreement on wages and hours made in 1919 did not by any means involve a crisis in the Lancashire cotton trade. All that the federation has done by its recent action was to make the 1919 agreement subject to review.

COTTON EASES AFTER RISE

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 1 to 3 points on overnight buying orders and trade buying. January sold up to 6.09 at the call while liquidation set in later and the market eased slightly.

The initial demand was comparatively light and after it had been supplied the market appeared to be without much support, with prices yielding rather readily to scattered selling. At the end of the first half hour January was selling at 6.01 and May 6.35, or 3 to 6 points net lower.

Liverpool cables reported continental selling in that market with fluctuations influenced by irregularity in sterling and easier Egyptian markets.

Trading continued quiet later in the morning and prices fluctuated within a range of 8 or 9 points. There was some further trade buying and covering on the decline while the bulges met realizing or liquidation and traders appeared to be awaiting further developments.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 3.—Spot cotton business done; prices 7 points lower. Quotations in pence: American strict good middling 5.75; good middling 5.35; strict middling 5.15; middling 5.05; strict low middling 4.95; low middling 4.85; strict good ordinary 4.65; good ordinary 4.35. Receipts 7,300 bales; all American. Futures closed quiet: December 4.76; January 4.75; March 4.75; May 4.75; July 4.80; October 4.86; December 4.89.

Freight Schedules Suspended by I. C. C.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Increases provided in 11 sections of the eastern and western class freight rate schedules were suspended for seven months by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The commission acted as a result of serious objection to several phases of the new rates, which went into effect yesterday and which included some decreases.

The commission more than a year ago prescribed a new basis of rate making for railroads in what is known as the eastern or official classification territory and western trunk line territory. These rates taken as whole, the commission has said, resulted in increases of approximately $25,000,000 a year in the East and $12,000,000 in the West.

ELLA CINDERS

Stranger Than Fiction

By Plumb and Conselman

Ella found out a lot of things she didn't know about Tommy. She's suffering pangs of remorse now for having so misjudged him...
THIS IS THE LAST CHAPTER, TOMMY! YOU KNOW, SON, I LIKE THIS BOOK, BECAUSE THE HERO HAS THE SAME NAME AS MY BOY! SHALL I GO ON READING?
OKAY, MA— I'LL BE FINISHED HERE IN A JIFFY!
"LADY WINIFRED, PROUD MISTRESS OF MOULTONCLYDE MANOR, CAST HERSELF AT SIR THOMAS' FEET— SIR THOMAS, THE MAN WHOM SHE HAD SO RECENTLY DENOUNCED AS UNFIT TO GRACE THE ANCESTRAL HALLS OF MOULTONCLYDE!
"SHE WAS PLEADING NOW. A THING SHE HAD NEVER DONE BEFORE. HER SOUL WAS BARED— GONE WAS HER ARROGANCE— SHE WAS A WOMAN NOW— A TITLED LADY DIVESTED OF HER MANTLE OF HAUTEUR— YET NO LESS BEWITCHING IN THE NEW ROLE. SIR THOMAS LOOKED DOWN AT THE WOMAN HE LOVED, AND EVEN AS HE LOOKED, SHE PLEADED:"

Should King Business Have a Congress?

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

WOULD A BUSINESS congress, a permanent body created by industry and trade associations, help to avert, or at least modify, such disastrous experiences as this country has been undergoing during the last two years?

That suggestion comes from Wallace B. Donham, a lawyer who had practical business experience before he became dean of the Harvard School of Business Administration.

This business congress should have, says Dean Donham, a first-class economic general staff, chosen by representatives of the government, representatives of industry and representatives of labor. Its objective would be "to study the principal shocks to which society is subject and to recommend elastic institutions or programs which will meet these shocks as nearly automatically and with as little delay as possible wherever they occur."

THE PROPOSED body would have no control over any corporation or enterprise whatsoever. Instead of being authoritative, it would be merely advisory, interpretative, diligent in research.

Its conclusions and recommendations would bind nobody. Action would lie with first federal or state governments convinced of the soundness of the conclusions reached by industries and trade associations.

THE AUTHOR of this plan says:

"I do not believe that any thinking agency can get results unless it is closely related to our industries through some representative body carefully chosen by the industries. The problem of stabilizing society in the midst of constantly shifting environment may be brought within the capacity of the human kind, without submerging the individual or losing the personal initiative and freedom of action on which the progress of mankind has been dependent through history."

MY HUMBLE opinion is that American industry needs to establish machinery for nation-wide co-operation. For years I have done my feeble best to arouse our best business brains to the necessity for organizing some such body as an institute for industrial co-ordination. But while everything was going swimmingly financial and business leaders felt no need for doing anything out of the ordinary. They were deaf to such warnings as:

"Seeing that we have, for the first time, unemployment during a period of exceptional prosperity, what will happen to employment when the inevitable depression follows the present prosperity?"

At one time I organized a meeting of business leaders but few attended. I then became convinced that only the spur of necessity would prod our so-called leaders into action.

THE SWOPE plan for taking care of unemployment is perhaps all right as far as it goes. But nation-wide co-operation, nation-wide guidance, nation-wide co-ordination would appear to be essential to achieving a maximum of success in avoiding periods of violent overproduction followed by periods of acute depression and unemployment.

TOO MANY of our big bank heads, too many industrialists, too many utility executives, too many of our foremost men of affairs are so completely engrossed in attending to their own personal and corporate interests, so immersed in their own particular jobs, that with a few shining exceptions they have failed to give convincing evidence that they grasp the larger and wider and more vital responsibilities devolving on them, their responsibilities as molders of our economic system, their responsibilities as commanders in chief of large bodies of breadwinners—and voters.

This axiom has been enunciated and widely accepted:

"A businessman can do his best for his country by successfully attending to his own business."

That is only a half-truth and, like most half-truths, is particularly mischievous. If each business magnate is out only for number one and entirely callous concerning the fate of the vast majority of citizens, how can finance and industry and business hope to meet their larger responsibilities, their social responsibilities, their economic responsibilities, their (if you will) political responsibilities?

ADMITTEDLY, BUSINESS today is king. Twentieth century history has starkly demonstrated what happens to kings who think only of themselves and exhibit utter indifference to the wellbeing of the whole people.

Wise kings do not in these modern times attempt to rule without a parliament, without a congress, without a representative body.

Therefore, may it not follow that it would be wise for King Business to give most serious consideration to bring into being a business congress to function along some such lines as here suggested?

COMMON SENSE IN BUSINESS HELD NEED

Situation Now Calls Less For Pessimism Than for Forward Reconstruction

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
(Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The illusion that our economic structure was basically sound has long since been abandoned. The situation calls less for pessimism than for intelligent, forward looking reconstruction.

Enlightened observers, including employers, are recognizing

Mr. Rukeyser

"Individual opportunity and initiative must necessarily carry with them individual risk of failure and no one who tries to be a leader can avoid these risks. Under our present situation, however, the risk is borne not alone by the individual who seeks personal opportunity through his initiative. Many others suffer with him.

"It is wrong that the risks of those who are seeking opportunity should be shared in full measure by millions of men who never wanted to take risks, who sought no opportunity except the opportunity to work. These millions are powerless to affect the situation or even to understand its implications. They are in no sense responsible for the conditions. Their primary desire, and to such extent as human rights can exist, their primary right is a chance to work for a living."

Industry in seeking to prevent a recurrence of existing chaos can approach the problem from two angles. One would be to give labor a stake in management and a share in profits, so that it would participate fully in prosperity as well as in adversity. The other would be to assure workers a greater sense of security of income through all stages of the business cycle. A first rate solution would entail the combination of both elements.

In dealing with the problem of relieving workers of fears of impoverishment during periods of unemployment and depression, James W. Hook, president of the Geometric Tool Company, of New Haven, and chairman of the Connecticut Unemployment Commission, believes that there are three types of unemployed who should be dealt with differently. He believes 25 per cent of the jobless are unemployable and should receive charity; that 35 per cent are unstable or nomadic workers, and should be cared for during hard times through forward planning of public works, and that the remaining 40 per cent are stable workers who should be provided for by industry itself.

ASK RECEIVER FOR STORES

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 3.—(AP)—The third receivership bill against City Stores, Inc., operators of a chain of department stores, was filed in United States District Court here last night.

Complainants in the new bill are Jacob Greenstein, of Far Rockaway, N. J., Charles Jacobson and the Twin Securities Corporation, both of New York. All are owners of common stock of City Stores.

The complainants filed a somewhat similar bill in the same court last week.

The new bill also alleges that while some of the stores controled by City Stores have been operated at a loss, high salaries and bonuses have been paid to Rudolph G. Goerke, president of City Stores and president of 1st Brothers, and members of his family who are also officers.

Big Lottery Loan Offered by Paris

PARIS, Dec. 3.—The City of Paris is offering a 4 per cent lottery loan of 1,250,000,000 francs at 98 per cent free of tax and repayable within 48 years. Proceeds will be used to finance public improvements and redeem the 5 per cent loan of 1919.

The Department of the Seine is issuing simultaneously a 4½ per cent 30-year loan of 220,000,000 francs at 98½.

Forecasts Deficit In French Budget

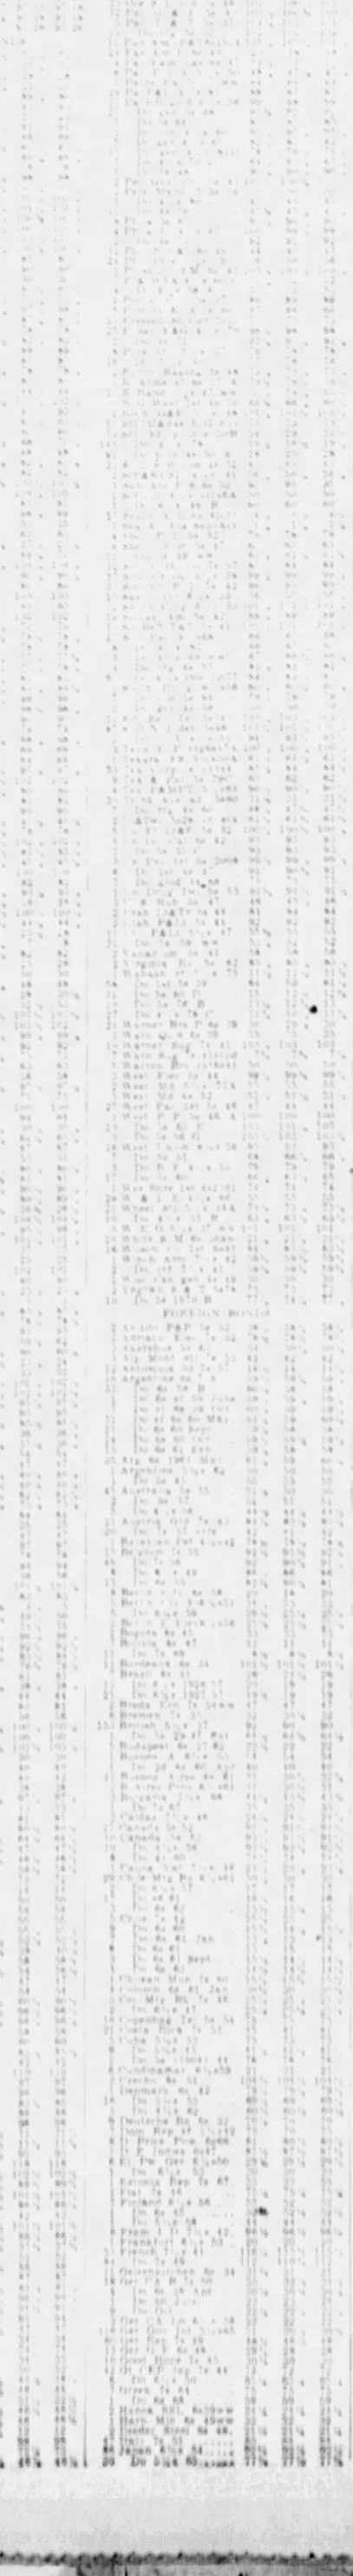
PARIS, Dec. 3.—The report of the finance committee of the French Chamber of Deputies on the 1932 budget estimated states that a balance of receipts and expenditures will be maintained by exceptional resources, including the Young unconditional annuity, but forecasts a deficit of 6,000,000,000 francs for 1933.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Irregularity marked a hesitant bond market today, although some of the better grade rails showed a tendency to stiffen in mid-day trading.

As a whole, however, the bidding was spiritless, investors apparently being in no hurry to search out bargains.

German loans and Argentine issues attracted the principal attention in the foreign section. The former sold off while the latter gained. Most United States government bonds were bought at a slight advance.



Wabash Receivership Due to Credit Conditions

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE RECEIVERSHIP OF THE WABASH Railway Company was directly attributable to strained banking conditions. Traffic has declined sharply in line with the business of all railroads but bankruptcy would have been avoided if the credit situation had been normal.

This statement was made yesterday by a director of the road who explained that accounts payable, bank loans and other charges could not be met out of income while business was going through the depression. In addition the road had loans on collateral which had suffered from market conditions. Ordinarily a railroad with the standing of the Wabash would have had no difficulty in securing temporary additional loans from banks to tide the system over until business improved or suitable long term financing could have been arranged.

With the banks just emerging from a critical situation, it was still impossible to secure a line of credit large enough to provide for the needs of the Wabash system. Due to the fact that the road's earnings in the past have been fairly satisfactory, it is generally believed that the present receivership will not be of long duration if the recovery of general business gets under way in the near future.

Securities Had High Rating

THAT WABASH IS SUFFERING from a temporary situation rather than from any fundamental unsoundness in its structure is apparent from the high rating enjoyed by its securities until a short time ago. The 1931 issue of Moody's Manual of Steam Railroads graded the line's first 5s, due in 1939, at "AAA," the highest rating given to any security. The junior issues graded down to "Ba" which is accorded to bonds with a satisfactory degree of safety.

Sensational declines have taken place in the prices of Wabash bonds this week. The prices reached indicate the general belief that the junior issues will default. No official statement has been made regarding the future of the bonds. It is quite likely, however, that there will be no default on the first 5s, 1939, or the extension first 5s, 1941. Interest will be due on several of the Wabash issues on January 1. The attitude of the receivers toward the various classes of bondholders will be clarified by that time.

Loss Expected

WABASH WILL REPORT a loss from the present year's operations but this will be attributable entirely to abnormal business conditions. In 1930 interest charges were earned more than 1½ times. Net income for the year was $3,781,755 which was equivalent to 31 cents a share on the common stock after deducting dividends on the preferred A and preferred B stocks. In 1929 net income was $7,854,404 or $6.42 a share on the common.

While the difficulties facing railroad managements have been serious, there has been a tendency to exaggerate the importance of present conditions. The railroads are suffering from the effects of the business slump more acutely than industrial organizations. But this is due to the peculiar operating characteristics of railroads and should not be given too much consideration when the long range prospects are studied.

The railroads have been troubled with the increasing competition of new forms of transportation during the past 10 years but many economists believe that the development of this menace is approaching its peak. Truck and water transportation are not the major factors affecting the railroads at present. The real blow has been struck by the general business depression.

STOCK EXCHANGE TOPICS

Union Carbide Expected to Earn $2 Share in Current Year.

Wall street expects that earnings of Union Carbide this year will be in the neighborhood of $2 a share on the stock. This prediction seems to be based on the fact that results for nine months were equal to $1.54 a share. The company increased its income steadily from 1922 to the peak in 1929. Last year there was a reduction of 21 per cent from the 1929 record, and in the first three-quarters of this year the income was 31 per cent below the same period of 1930.

That the management of National Cash Register will depend to a good extent on foreign business is indicated by the plans which are being carried out for making a thorough survey of the export field. This has been an important branch of the company's business in the past, and an increase in sales and exports to foreign countries would be a big factor in the future.

Wall street already is beginning to talk of fourth quarter earnings prospects. A few months ago, many believed that various factors, such as a seasonal improvement in demand and wage reductions would bring about better revenues than were recorded in the third quarter of the year. However, it is evident that downward revisions in estimates are now being made.

Much attention is being given to the steel industry. The belief was that October would show improvement in operations, whereas actual figures showed the output below that that of September. Since the middle of last month there has been a gradual downward trend in steel mill activity, so that these companies are not likely to show as good results as anticipated when the third quarter ended.

Pennsylvania was sluggish yesterday when rail stocks staged a spurt in response to the news of the recommendation by the Canadian board of conciliation for a 10 per cent reduction in wages on Dominion roads. The reason for Pennsylvania's backwardness was not hard to find considering its big stake in both Wabash and Lehigh Valley. At the end of 1930, Pennsylvania, through its subsidiary, Pennsylvania Company, owned 362,900 shares of Wabash common stock and 312,900 shares of the preferred "A." These shares were purchased in recent years at a cost of $63,041,548 and had an open market value around the low levels yesterday of little more than $1,240,000. Its Lehigh Valley holdings, 365,039 shares, acquired at a cost of $43,551,208, have an approximate open market value now of $5,475,000.

People well-informed raise the contention that there is too much harping on the matter of German short-term credits. Time is near when, however, this matter will be in the limelight again. The Basle meeting to determine Germany's capacity to pay and the meeting of international bankers dealing with short-term credits will get under way next Thursday. So far as the short-term credits outstanding under the standstill agreement expiring the end of February are concerned, it is understood plans for dealing with that phase are practically cut and dried. American short-term credits have been segregated into two classes, eligible and ineligible, the last mentioned to be funded. Just what portion is placed in each category is not, however, made clear.

Dolls for Boys? Why Not?

SUN-TELEGRAPH DOLL LADY

Will Be Glad to Give Her Big "Honeybunches"

To Little Boys As Well As Little Girls

Mothers of Little Boys Should Read Today's Letter:

Dear Little Boys and Girls:

The same question has again crept into my doll distribution that I had to answer last year. Two or three anxious mothers have either written to me or called me on the phone and asked, "Is your doll for little girls only? I have a little boy, nearly 3 years old, and he want a dolly just as much as any little girl that I know of. Can't I get a 'Honeybunch' for my Billy?"

Of course, she can. Why not? Dolls were not necessarily created exclusively for little girls. When I was a youngster, my two little brothers really played with my dollies more than I did.

Any Little Boy Would Like "Honeybunch" For a Playmate

So if there has been a general feeling created to the effect that little boys can't have a "Honeybunch," forget it. Then, again, there are lots and lots of little boys who will do what I am asking the little girls to do so that they can get this big dolly for sister before Christmas. If there is any little boy who wants a "Honeybunch," he is just as welcome to it as any little girl, and I'll wager that he'll get just as much enjoyment from this big, marvelous doll as he would out of a wagon or a velocipede. So, that's that.

And now just line to the little girls. Scores of them have already secured their "Honeybunches" and each and every one of these girls is enjoying a big slice of happiness long before Christmas. At that it's not so long—only 22 days 'till Christmas. This means that there must be no delay if you want your "Honeybunch" before the holidays.

Now just a word about this marvelous dolly. She's really a darling. I wish that I could get some of the little girls, who already have one, to tell you about her. Yes, she's a great big doll—just about 20 inches tall. Charming voice, twinkly eyes that open and close, rubber hands and arms that are unbreakable; she's dressed in dainty, lace trimmed organdy with lace cap and shoes and stockings to match. She uses a pacifier and has rubber panties. She really does a lot of cute things that real live babies can do.

Now if you want a "Honeybunch" all for yourself and right away—before the Christmas rush—send me your name and address in the coupon below and I'll send you a letter telling what the easy things are that you will have to do for me. And I'll send you a picture of "Honeybunch."

Here are the names of some of the little girls who have already written to me: Elizabeth Scott, Donna Mahon, Ida Mae Daugherty, Jean Readman, Mary Jane Terney, Margaret Malone, Anna Mae Hartzell, Marjorie Burch, Pearl Heasley, Dorothy Mae Lucas, Agnes Dungan, Marjorie Johnston, Francis Sandel, Dorothy Fink and Audra Claire Speicher.

Creditors Cause Imogen to Increase Efforts for Wealthy Husband

CHAPTER XII

Laurel sat with her friends on a silver mattress that was laid on the silvered floor of an upper room in the "speakeasy."

An intoxicated young man slumbered near the door. Someone was playing jazz at the piano.

The rest had drinks in long glasses at their elbows.

Laurel got up. She wanted to make a closer inspection of those walls.

They were decorated with odd drawings . . .

"Cleo's certainly seen life," whispered Freddie, joining her. "These pictures—if you could call them such—are a rough outline of her own history."

"Then rough's the word," Laurel returned, "good gracious as time goes on, the clothes get scantier!"

Wall number three was still more amorous, with large hearts enclosing the oddest episodes.

Wall number four was more alcoholic.

The lady was depicted with a bottle . . . several bottles . . . and her pictured male companions seemed to grow younger and younger.

"Quite the present fashion, gigoloesque, you know," tripped off Laurel's tongue.

"Wise child!" Little Laurel is gradually discovering the great gay world."

"Don't mock me. I think it's rather beastly, really. Sort of debauched."

"What is? Life in general? Or just this place?"

"Oh, everything. Tell me, Freddie, what's the big idea here?"

He grinned. "Well, Cleo says she's establishing a sort of salon. Continental stunt you know."

"H'm! To restore the lost art of conversation?"

"Oh, they all talk enough when they get tight. That's nothing original."

"Um um again! So she fancies herself as a Madame Recamier?"

"The virtuous French highbrow of a century or two ago?"

"Yep."

"Well, I wouldn't call Cleo exactly a blue stocking."

MANY INTRODUCTIONS

Laurel studied the walls again. "Seems to me the main stunt of this place is steady intensive drinking . . ."

More people arrived. They were smart and well-dressed. Somehow they didn't suggest the Bohemian.

Laurel seated herself once more on the silver mattress that was only a few inches from the floor, and observed them.

The women that came alone were introduced to men. "My idea is that we should all be one big family," observed Cleo affably.

Most of them paired off.

"Say, Freddie, is this a matrimonial agency?"

He grinned again. "I keep an open mind, dear heart. Use your own bright little optics plus your imagination."

"I'm no Sherlock Holmes. I only see what's below my nose."

"Come on. Loosen up. Have another drink and be natural."

"Well, isn't it growing more and more so all the time? Look over at that couple."

Someone had switched off the extra light, and only the pale blue lamp illuminated them. In a corner, oblivious to everything about them, a young man and a girl were kissing.

Moonlight effect again." The man at the piano had broken into a love-song, sweetly saccharine.

Laurel looked around. "Where's Imogen?"

Imogen had been commandeered by Cleo, the proprietress, and was being introduced to a fat and red-faced man.

A MILLIONAIRE

Imogen was all smiles. She was in black and white today and looked like a picture of the Merry Widow.

Pipe the provocative stare! See Imogen making a big play for him," jeered Freddie.

Why should she? Im has lots of beaux. That fat slob must be all of 50."

But he's a millionaire, dear heart. What's a slim waistline compared to MONEY."

Well, he looks like a gunman to me. And I don't trust that Cleo creature."

Oh, Cleo's all right. She used to be the life and soul of the Dome cafe in Paris."

Hum!" Among all the needy artists and the shady characters and the Apaches?"

Well, what of it? Im can take care of herself."

Don't be too sure. I'm reckless enough, the lord alone knows . . . but Imogen goes me one better."

The fat man and Imogen were sitting heads very close together. She's making hay while the sun shines."

You mean in the moonshine, Freddie."

Moonshine is all right."

Well, I wouldn't be a bit surprised if we all woke up in the patrol wagon."

H'm. Breakfast with a sore head in the police station?"

Well, it wouldn't be the first time for YOU, by all accounts, Freddie."

Easy now, Laurel!"

The way we go, none of us can expect to keep outside the bars forever!"

You optimistic child! Quit staring at Imogen."

Cleo came up and whispered to them, importantly, that the fat man's wife was in the lunatic asylum.

And that's another place we can't expect to stay out of for long," observed Laurel sagaciously.

Freddie let out an uproarious laugh.

It sounded oddly in this room—just as though one had guffawed in church!

And Laurel thought:—"It's a long time since I've been in church . . ." And that made her think of the young, good-looking doctor.

Yes, he HAD lectured her . . .

But she'd enjoyed their all-too-brief meetings . . . had hung almost like a drowning person on his conversation.

Odd, wasn't it?

But he was SO fascinating.

In the right kind of a way, too.

And yet there was nothing priggish about him.

What would he think of this place? The sob stuff at the piano played by an effeminate male.

They WERE hungry looking. That was no exaggeration. And quite a number of them had come here alone.

To what end? "Escape" from their own solitary regretful thoughts? The drinks that meant temporary forgetfulness? Or the bright face of danger?

* * *

Imogen commandeered her little party up to Timmy Tewson's.

Imogen was in great good form. She had made a date with the man whose wife was in the lunatic asylum . . .

Not only that, but she had so far forgotten herself as to invite him up to Timmy's!

Which, in a soberer mood she would have known was a tactical mistake, because it didn't do to mix one's admirers any more than to mix one's beverages!

The fat man had agreed to come. He seemed rather dazzled at the prospect.

Rolling in money!" Cleo the proprietress of the speakeasy had whispered to Imogen.

That was just the type of "sugar" for which Imogen was looking.

She was inordinately greedy for good times, clothes, jewels and orchids . . .

And Imogen was poor, which, as she said, was the hell of it!

To "root" for money . . . but she was past the stage of being squeamish as to her method of dollar-extraction.

And as Timmy was usually tight himself from this time in the evening on until the small hours of the morning, maybe he wouldn't connect the presence of the newcomer with herself.

Laurel's approach shattered Imogen's plan of "speeding things up."

Yet he could be extremely disagreeable, could Timmy, both in and out of his cups!

And JEALOUS!

To keep her so-call "beaux" from finding out her exact relations with the others, was a matter requiring great finesse.

Like Laurel Oakes, she had been growing weary of everything lately.

And of her innumerable bills, she was badly in need of CASH!

She had been "easy" far too often. When one was fed-up on life, one drank . . . and when one drank, one forgot one's clever tactics and made an idiot of oneself!

But she'd pull herself together now, and make hay while the sun shone. This rich man with the wife conveniently tucked away in the asylum seemed strongly attracted to her.

Not that men STAYED that way. If they had—thought Imogen grimly and regretfully—but now she'd be a millionairess.

Well, anyhow, maybe life would be tamer than ever then. She had never been able to visualize living without money difficulties . . .

Sometimes she felt she hated Laurel for her easy circumstances.

But Laurel was a good kid. In so far as she could care for any female creature, Imogen quite liked Laurel.

She'd hated to see Roger taking notice of her, however.

For Imogen looked on Roger as her own special property. And maybe one day—if the old man didn't prove too unyielding she might be "Mrs. Roger Sartoris."

Meantime, there were rich "Sugars" like Timmy.

And this new man she had annexed tonight . . . one Samuel Schumph.

"Gracious! it's after 7. Timmy'll be waiting . . ." She had pushed Freddie, Laurel and her new acquaintance into a taxicab.

Soon they were speeding up Park avenue. They alighted at a skyscraper and shot up to the roof.

It was a warm evening, and Timmy's roof-garden looked very attractive. Like an oasis high above busy New York.

Champagne on ice was waiting for them. And Timmy himself, in a cool-looking Palm Beach suit.

He kissed Imogen with a show of delight at seeing her.

"And how's my 'Tim?" she whispered to him, sotto voce.

The answer was agreeably ardent. Imogen felt a kind of balm steal into her soul.

If only Timmy or some of the well-to-do would propose to her! If only she could find some quiet haven out of the turmoil!

Who knows . . . maybe tonight he would . . . if she didn't drink too much? Not that his "commitments" meant anything, as next morning he'd usually forgotten everything he'd said . . .

He had a breach of promise suit on hand . . . but his lawyers were crafty. The girl that roped HIM in must be unusually smart . . .

The champagne circulated freely. There was the clink of ice and a gay, heart-warming popping of corks.

"You do EVERYTHING so well, dear Tim!" cooed Imogen, leading her host behind a little grove of orange trees that were set out near the edge of the swimming pool in tubs.

He slipped an arm about her, kissed her. She put her left arm round his shoulders with the other holding up her glass.

"To your happiness, Timmy! And may everything that you want in the world come to you!"

Would he say more? Hadn't she given him a lead? He was obtuse.

"You're really glad to see me, Timmy?" Her face was tilted up provocatively. She was very close . . .

Then Laurel Oakes—confound her tactlessness!—came 'round the corner of the orange trees. The hope of "speeding things up" was dashed.

But there would be other opportunities this evening.

Imogen would make them.

And if she missed the mark, there was the rich Schumph.

Only there couldn't be a marriage there, because of his wife in a lunatic asylum.

Maybe as well?

Without any legal tie at all—if one played one's cards right—one could extract everything!

Synopsis

Laurel Oakes, "modern" to the minute, is invited by her friend, Imogen Gay, who is even more sophisticated, to attend a party in an old deserted farmhouse. When the party gets too wild for Laurel she leaves. Going to her roadster on a dark road, Laurel discovers the tires slashed. Running madly down the road, she is picked up by Bruce Harvey, a young physician, who takes her home. Laurel tells her mother that pleasure means more to her than love or romance. Laurel decides to make a favorable impression on Dr. Harvey when she returns home and discovers him having tea with her mother. Laurel rides to a hospital with Harvey and waits outside in his automobile for a long time until he returns. Later, Harvey tells Laurel that she ought to stop seeking pleasure and get married. On the way to a party at Timmy Tewson's, with Imogen and Freddie DeFarge, Laurel stops in a speakeasy with them.

Now Go On

A Philippine servant came to say that dinner was ready.

They trooped into the long Spanish living room. Another Philippine boy stood behind a little cocktail bar.

"Who wants another drink?" cried Timmy.

Imogen forgot her decision and quaffed a dry Martini.

Those infernal bills! Her dressmaker and her milliner, her bootlegger and her beauty specialist all annoyed her!

Something must be done about it—quickly—unless she wanted the tale of her debts to be printed in the newspapers . .

The thing was MARRIAGE—a RICH marriage—!

Then, when she could stick it out no longer—

A-L-I-M-O-N-Y!

They Distrust Democracy

Council of Churches Would Let Minority Opinion Continue to Rule the Nation.

The Pennsylvania Council of Churches formally approved on Tuesday a report of its Committee on Social Service containing this sentence:

"The announced purpose of the national parties' committees to keep the wet issue out of the planks, and to advocate a referendum, is commendable."

To many persons familiar with the attitude of the ministers who control the Council of Churches it seemed incredible that it should commend the plan to submit the prohibition question to the voters.

Nevertheless the action of the Council spoke for itself, and accordingly there were those who said:

"At last the ministers have seen the light. They recognize that there is much to be said against prohibition—that the dry law is not and cannot be enforced, that it has given rise to racketeering, and has led to the corruption of public officials. They recognize that in a democracy it is fitting that the people should pass directly on this vexatious problem, and they also have the intelligence to appreciate that a direct expression on prohibition cannot be obtained through the inclusion of prohibition or anti-prohibition planks in political platforms because the platforms contain other planks which confuse the issue. Having faith in the good judgment of the majority of the people, the ministers have concluded that it is best to get rid of this troublesome matter by letting the citizens pass upon it clearly and unmistakably."

Unfortunately those who thus interpreted the action of the Council of Churches were mistaken.

The ministers did not have the breadth of vision that was attributed to them.

They did not mean what they said.

It was not their intention to say that the plan for a referendum was commendable.

Just how they came to say it, and why, has not been made clear; but they removed all doubts as to their real attitude by formally declaring, after they learned they were being credited with favoring the submission of the liquor question to the people:

"The Pennsylvania Council of Churches records its opposition to any proposed referendum on the prohibition amendment."

It is disappointing. It indicates that the Council distrusts democracy and is perfectly willing that minority sentiment should continue to rule the nation.

The ministers favor prohibition. If they were of the opinion that the majority of the people favored prohibition, who can doubt that they would welcome a referendum? What better way to confound and silence the anti-drys could be found than through a direct vote of the people in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment?

Unwise Tax Plans

The Proposed Imposts on Cigarets and Gasoline Will Give More Trouble Than They Are Worth.

The mountain labored—and brought forth a mouse.

This seems an apt characterization of the course of the Legislature, which after four weeks of study has finally compromised with Gov. Pinchot on an utterly inadequate plan to deal with Pennsylvania's unemployment distress.

The chief features of the new program are an additional tax of one cent a gallon on gasoline and a tax of one cent on every 10 cigarets sold.

Instead of going after the dollars of the rich they intend to take the pennies of the poor. Goodness only knows there are enough poor, but the state will not raise nearly as much money by making the poor man pay two cents more for a pack of cigarets and a cent more for a gallon of gasoline, as the advocates of these taxes expect.

The proposed taxes will lead to the bootlegging of contraband cigarets and gasoline. That has been the experience of other states that have tried the cigaret tax and of Pennsylvania with the gasoline tax.

These tax bills should be killed.

Surely there are enough brains in the Legislature to devise some better plan.

The lawmakers are employed and paid by the people to work out sound solutions of the state's problem.

They are not delivering the goods with their proposed cigaret and gasoline taxes.

Another Outrage

Some of the Sentences Imposed for Violation of the Game Laws Are Too Severe.

The Sun-Telegraph denounced as an outrage a few days ago a sentence of 504 days in prison imposed by a Center County Justice of the Peace on a poor man found guilty of shooting deer at night with the use of artificial light and unable to pay a fine.

An even more outrageous case was reported from Venango County yesterday. There a poor man was committed to prison for 106 days because he carried off the carcass of a deer killed by a railroad train 12 hours before the hunting season opened. Illegal possession of deer was the charge. If the facts are as reported, the man's guilt was merely technical, and he might well have been discharged.

This business of imposing for violation of the game laws penalties as severe as are ordinarily imposed for robberies and other crimes involving moral turpitude is all wrong.

Peril in Old Mines

Have All the Abandoned Workings in This Vicinity Been Sealed Against Intruders?

Just a year ago five boys with candles entered an old and abandoned coal mine in the South Hills to explore it in the spirit of adventure. All were overcome by poisonous gas and found dead.

There is a reminder of this sad affair in a similar incident that recently occurred near Trinidad, Col., where four men entered an abandoned mine, with the result that three lost their lives and the fourth was badly gassed.

After the Pittsburgh tragedy a movement was inaugurated to seal up abandoned mines in order to keep the curious out. It might be well to check on the situation again. A good many mines have stopped working during the past year on account of the industrial depression. Perhaps some of them have been definitely abandoned. Is entrance barred?

Danger lurks in these old workings.

Yes, they will—NOT!

Will other World Powers, seeing the war clouds that hover over Europe and the Far East, pay very much attention to the pious pronouncements of the League of Nations, that there is no war in Manchuria?

Will other World Powers trust to the paper protection of Piffle Pacts against the bombs, bayonets and bullets of their enemies?

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

These Modern Don Juans

It is a common mistake of modern men to assume that every girl is pining for love and just yearning to be petted. That, if a man does not offer to kiss her good-night, her whole evening will be spoiled.

* * *

The "good-night" pass and the automatic embrace, as the cab rolls up to the door, are getting to be almost a social obligation. Those men just hate to disappoint a woman!

* * *

Oh, yes, all women want to be made love to—sometimes. But not all women want to be kissed by ALL men! And that's the fatal mistake that most men make.

* * *

Not even Casanova or Don Juan, himself, could have been sure that all the women he kissed actually wanted to be kissed. Some of them may have been merely good-natured, some merely curious—and some of them bored to tears. And lots of them may have just put up a bluff, so as not to be classed as "flat tires."

Lots of girls "pet," these days, when they don't want to be petted, because they think it's the thing to do, and they are afraid of being classed as dead ones. And lots of girls don't pet, when they DO want to be petted, because they think that's the thing to do—and they are afraid of being thought cheap.

* * *

And no man can tell, by the way in which a woman receives or refuses his kisses, whether she wants to be loved or not!

* * *

But, try and make him believe it! There never lived a man so stupid, so homely or so antique that he could imagine his kisses being unwelcome—to ANY woman! A girl may convince a man that he cannot kiss her—but never that she doesn't WANT him to!

* * *

Yet, incomprehensible as it may seem, women are sensitive and selective creatures, and may shudder at your touch. The hand you press may yearn to pull your top hair, and the lips you caress may be suppressing a yawn of ennui. You never can tell!

Women is by nature monogamous. Every woman is a one-man-at-a-time woman. And, while a woman is thinking of one man, the kisses of all other men are worse than boresome to her. They are positively distasteful.

* * *

This is perfectly logical—as well as biological. When you are parching for lemon-ice, it is nauseating to be offered hot plum pudding. Yet, no man ever doubted that he could prove a perfectly satisfying substitute for any other man in a woman's heart.

* * *

All women want to be loved. All women sigh for affection, but not from all men, nor at all times. "The time, the place and the girl" is an old saying, which must have originated with a MAN. Because, in that care free masculine manner, he assumes that if the girl is right "any old man will do!"

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—There is not a more pleasing walk in the city than a stroll down the park side of upper Fifth avenue in the clear dusk and phantom stillness of a winter evening. Southward gigantic towers spiral into ruddy flame. In the street the finest motors purr softly by.

Along the stone benches huddle a variety of figures—old men and women dreaming, a student bending over a book in the twilight and enraptured young lovers. Now and then hawkers dart from the shadow of trees holding forth packets of chewing gum, bags of lavender, pencils, etc.

Through the lighted windows of Millionaires' Row are peeps of the splendor of luxurious living. Grave butlers drift out to sidewalks with coddled elyis. Silk-hatted men and furred women emerge momentarily to step into limousines and be whisked off to evening pleasures.

At Ninetieth street stands the gloomy red brick mansion with the haughty high iron fence of the late Andrew Carnegie. In the surrounding garden, chattering with birds, are the shifting shades of old and dark wine. High up in the top floor is always a solitary blob of misty light.

Near Eighty-sixth street is the four-storied mansion of young Phil Plant, said to be the most magnificently furnished bachelor home in these parts. The upper story is the "play room" where after-theater guests indulge dolors or merriments of the moment.

Dotting the broad plaza in front of the art museum are cultured groups exchanging their views about the wonders of this and that. Many of the finest residences are gone—palaces housing the Clarks, Astors and such—given way to astonishing apartment crags, known only by numbers.

And many are occupied by what one dowager snippily dubbed "sumptuous social slag."—Yet the upper avenue still bristles with aristocracy. It has a stride bitter sneers cannot erase. That dignity suggesting candle light on old silver. And what is so dignified?

* * *

When Col. Joseph Hartfield came to New York a struggling Kentucky lawyer he wrote to one of the leading law firms for at least an interview. The answer came back to his shabby rooming house: "I am sorry we have no room for you." To which Col. Hartfield replied: "When you see me I think you will realize I do not take up much room." He is pint-sized. The interview was granted. Col. Hartfield is now the senior member of that firm and a justly famous international lawyer.

H. G. Wells was fascinated by New York speakeasies. He saw all the glorified dives. Those fortunate in his companionship pronounce him a great dramatic genius. His mind is like a roulette ball, leaping here and there, and he of all fast thinkers is best equipped to make an inanity appear a juicy mot. Tempted to express himself on subjects upon which he is empty, he never fails to reply. And never fails to get away with it. Mr. Wells, excited, turns tenor.

* * *

When the Waldorf opened, many ached to be first to register. A certified check for $20,000 for a banquet came from one hopeful with the proviso of winning that distinction, if any. Incidentally the man accorded the honor was Charles Hayden, a banker, who raised the mazuma for the structure.

* * *

Hotel registers recall fledgling journalistic days in Cincinnati. A shabby little walk-up inn a few steps off George street suffered an early morning blaze. Those of us on the lobster shift, which included the romantically named Donald Dunbar, dispatched for details, sought the register for list of patrons. The page of that date was headed by "John Smith and wife." And merrily down the page and far into the next were a riotous zig zag of ditto marks.

I am in the throes of utter sartorial depression today. Last night at the Lido a gentleman hellingbout in an old fashioned waltz revealed that his white bosomed shirt front and cuffs were attached to a background of fiery red silk. I nudged Irwin Cobb to behold the phenomenon and he observed: "I'm glad you saw it. I thought it was another bilious spell."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

When I was young I spent a great deal of time trying to explain myself.

Partly, this was due to the fact that I liked to talk about myself and explanations gave me a chance to do so. But I also thought that it was really necessary that people should understand me and my acts. It was—I felt—my duty to explain myself to them. And it was THEIR duty to listen carefully, sympathetically, until they understood me. For if I humbled myself enough to explain, they certainly should be willing to understand—

I wanted that understanding more than anything on earth. Life was such a bewildering affair. I was so often lonesome and sad and ashamed. There seemed to be a barrier between my life and the other lives around me. I felt like a prisoner within that barrier. And when I did something clumsy or wrong, the barrier seemed to grow thicker—crueler—

But surely, if people understood me, that barrier would disappear. I would no longer feel shut out. I'd be accepted as one of the family. And their friendliness would warm me and put me at ease—

So I hammered away at that barrier with torrents of words . . . with constant explanations—

But in spite of my frantic efforts I failed to make myself understood. People, it is true, listened to me—but without enthusiasm. Their eyes were indifferent. They were bored—sometimes openly irritated. It was painfully obvious that they only listened because they had to.

And this was true of those who loved me most. Even they were not interested in my self-analysis. They weren't touched by my courage and frankness in thus exposing my weakness. Frankness was no treat to them. Plainly, they wished I'd shut up . . . quit talking about myself . . . let them talk about themselves.

As for understanding me—why all this fuss? Why should I expect them to understand me? Didn't they have enough to do without understanding me? Who was I to demand such generous gobs of attention and consideration? Couldn't I see I was really making a nuisance of myself—a conceited pest?

So some of my friends reasoned. Others were even less kind. They listened all too intently to my confessions—and despised me for them. If I was such a sap as that, why didn't I keep it to myself? I must be pretty nutty to spill the beans like that on myself. Or maybe I was far worse than I said—and this pretense of frankness was just a slick cover-up! When my other friends had yawned, these sneered—which was worse.

So the years went on and my explanations continued to fall flat. But gradually I came to see that it was right and reasonable that they should. For after all, did explanations—even the most honest and brave explanations—ever really explain anything? Never. I told people why I had done certain things. But did I really know why I had done those things? No, I didn't. I could analyze a few of the more obvious urges, but the deep secret reasons that governed my behavior were as much a mystery to me as to anyone else. It was all simply part of this troublesome business of Growth. And since everyone else had their hands full with their own growth, why should I insist upon bothering them with mine?

Also—wasn't I really cheapening myself by discussing these secrets of myself with everyone. Even if the things I did were mistaken things, shouldn't I stand by my own acts with dignity and decent reserve? Didn't I merely make a bad matter worse if I advertised it? I should . . . I did!

So—I'm making fewer and fewer explanations as I go along through life. And I find I'm just as popular and considerably more powerful. It is true that I still feel shut off from the rest of the world—I still feel lonely and sad and shamed. But this, I have discovered, is a condition no one can mend . . . it is a common affliction which no one escapes. And one should bear it like a man instead of a squalling child.

As for that old yearning to Have People Understand Me—I've quite reversed my opinion. NOW I THANK GOD THEY DON'T.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Song of Life

This is the song of life.
Hear how it runs
Through the snail's moving house,
Through stars and suns.
Hear how it echoes in
Dim ocean caves;
Rings on white mountain heights
Where the wind raves!

Never at rest, life flows
Ceaselessly on,
Under the heaped-up leaves
When summer is gone.
Deep in the earth it sleeps,
Or in stripped tree,
Pulsing, though slower now,
Life's mystery.

This is the song of life,
Boundless and sweet;
Flowing through rose and star,
Hear its heart beat!

Text For Today The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy. He will not always chide: neither will he keep his anger for ever. He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.—Psalms, ciii:8, 10.

The Day's News: 'Man's Inhumanity to Man'

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

We are glad that Paul Blanshard, director of the City Affairs Committee in New York, has broken in upon the chorus of jeers at Mayor Walker for daring to raise his voice and dedicate his ability to the cause of Tom Mooney, which he thinks the cause of humanity and justice. The public must have been persuaded that there is something reprehensible in the act; that the Mayor has lowered the dignity of the community of which he is the official head. A dignity which wars with justice is contemptible.

The trouble today is that we have too much dignity of this sort, a dignity with a pretentious pose and a rotten heart. Mr. Blanshard is fair enough to praise the Mayor for doing what he thinks is right.

We have pronounced opinions of our own on the Mooney case, but we merely set forth elemental facts on which ordinary people, who are not snobs and are captains of their souls, may determine for themselves how "reprehensible" and "outrageous" is the Mayor's conduct in the case.

Mooney Is Still in Prison

Fifteen years ago during a preparedness parade in San Francisco a bomb was thrown and two men were killed.

An attempt was being made at the time to organize the street car workers of the community, and the fight was bitter, and Mooney was a labor leader. He was charged with the crime. He was tried, found guilty, sentenced to death.

The chief prosecuting witness was charged with perjury and tried while the Mooney appeal was pending in the Supreme Court, and the District Attorney employed lawyers for the defense.

So insistent was the claim that Mooney had no fair trial and that the evidence was more than questionable that President Wilson did the unprecedented thing of urging the Governor to grant a new trial.

The United States Supreme Court refused to review the case.

Later, as the time for the execution approached, President Wilson twice telegraphed the Governor, begging his intercession, and the sentence was then commuted to life imprisonment.

Since then the two prosecuting witnesses, on whose testimony the jury found Mooney guilty, have confessed that they gave perjured testimony and one declared that he had been coached in his perjury by the District Attorney.

As a result the judge who presided at the trial and the jury that voted to convict have appeared before the Governor begging for a pardon on the ground that they had convicted on evidence that had been found perjured.

But more than one Governor has refused to act, and Mooney is still in prison.

The case has attracted attention all over the world; even the American Bar Association has taken cognizance; and thousands believe the case a blot on the records of American courts. Among these is Mayor Walker; and he is in California on the urging of great numbers of reputable people who share his belief.

If the Mayor believes Tom Mooney innocent he has done a gallant, an heroic, a superbly courageous and humanitarian act, and no one of his jeering critics has pointed out just what is reprehensible in his conduct.

One Invites Abuse

It never "pays" to fight the battle of the underdog. Inevitably one invites abuse. Even "Dignity" and "Respectability" rush to the gutter, and somehow the veriest gutter-snipe is never quite so nasty in the gutter as "Dignity" and "Respectability." Theodore Dreiser has found that out.

At the meeting called by Dreiser in New York Sunday night a man of the mines from Harlan County, Kentucky, told a plain story of conditions there that brought tears to the eyes of many in the audience. It was a story of savage treatment, of squalor, of cabins through which blew the winter winds, of sickness, death, of little pine coffins for the children made by the fathers, of murderous conduct by hired thugs.

And yet because Dreiser was outraged, as a human being, and sought to expose the conditions there, he has been indicted, and an attempt is being made to send him to the penitentiary for 25 years! And for a time everyone was jeering him, but now the leader of the American bar, John W. Davis, has stepped forth as his defender in the courts.

We must know whether this sort of thing can be done in America.

Gov. Pinchot Should Act

"Man's inhumanity to man"—we have not risen above that yet.

The other day during Signor Grandi's visit in Philadelphia a foolish youth jumped on the running board of his machine and cried "Down with Mussolini!" He made no physical assault, attempted none, evidently had none in mind. It was a silly thing of course. Grandi was the guest of the nation and was entitled to protection against insult. It is none of our business what form of government they have in Italy. That is for the Italians to determine.

But the silly youth was arrested—and sent to the penitentiary for two years. That impresses us as monstrous.

It impressed Grandi as a sentence ridiculously out of proportion to the offense, and he personally telegraphed Gov. Pinchot in the youth's behalf. Pinchot replied at once that he had no power; that power was with the Board of Pardons. He should have said that personally he would be glad to lay Grandi's plea before the board; and we hope he does. He can do no less and do his duty.

La Follette's Message Is Worth Reading

It takes courage and a kind of greatness to speak out for the underdog, and too few have it. The La Follettes have it. I have before me a remarkable document—the message just submitted to the Legislature of Wisconsin by Gov. Phil La Follette. It sets forth facts on present conditions with relentless accuracy, and submits a program that some will find alarming. It goes to the grass roots of patent evils, and whether you can subscribe to all his program or not, it is worth reading. But he warns the legislators what to expect if they undertake it.

"You will be assailed. They will say that you are destructive, although they offer no alternative themselves. They will tell you that the government cannot put five million men to work, although they put four millon American young men to work at the business of war; that they squandered $40,000,000,000 of American money in the most wasteful and futile war of modern history. And yet they will say that you are extravagant and wasteful and visionary because you propose to spend millions or billions to build highways and bridges and power plants that will make the farmers' and the workers' life better and happier; you can spend tens of billions to destroy—but nothing to build a richer and a finer life."

This, then, is a protest against the disposition, especially in these days of human misery, to sneer and jeer at people who have the courage to fight the battles of the underdog. Not merely because it is inhuman; but rather because it is undignified and vulgar.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Why so satisfied to be an imitator?

Artists say that "a poor original is better than a good copy," and it is much the same in principle outside the art line.

Don't be a copyist—think out things for yourself—be original.

However, being original is not being a freak.

Many persons have that conception of one who is "original," and imagine that to do a thing that has not been done before is freakishness.

You do not want to bestir your brain enough to think out something different unless you are to benefit materially.

But such an attitude means that when you might be able to benefit by your personal, out-of-the-ordinary suggestions, your brain won't work.

To be always seeking aggrandizement in order to do your best work means that you have limited yourself in a two-fold way.

When you get ready to do the unusual and more valued work because it is different, you cannot set your brain storehouse to work.
